One Very Big Bank.
These Are Days of Talk.
Far Down, Below Zero.
Popular Cheap Money.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ALBERT H. WIGGIN, retiring head of the Chase National Bank, biggest in America, sailing for Europe to look after some hundreds of millions of American private loans, has been busy of late with "farewell dinners," organized by important business men that have worked with or near him in the past.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, son of the late United States Senator Aldrich, who succeeds Mr. Wiggin as head of the Chase Bank, has said that "someone might take Mr. Wiggin's place, but no one could REPLACE him."

Frederick H. Ecker, president of the concern that has more money than any other in the United States, joins with the biggest bankers in telling Mr. Wiggin how great a banker he is. But it is all told more simply in Chase National Bank figures, interesting to Americans.

WHEN THE bank started in 1877, its total resources were ONE million and forty-two thousand dollars. At the end of last month those resources amounted to ONE THOUSAND EIGHT HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SIX MILLION DOLLARS. Since 1921, the Chase Bank has swallowed and digested seven great banks and two big trust companies, including one of the biggest in the world.

THE 77 MEN on the Chase board of directors are a "who's who" in the world of dollars. There are 68 vice presidents, 66 second vice presidents, 110 assistant cashiers, seven great affiliated financial corporations, which Chase controls, 44 branch banks in New York City, other branch banks in Paris, Mexico City, China, Japan and an army of lawyers to protect those eighteen hundred million.

A modern bank is a complicated thing.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT has talked with Huey Long, of Louisiana, powerful "Kingfish," who reports that the Governor said to him:

"Huey, you're going to do just as I tell you."

And Huey replied:

"Yes, Governor, I am."

The kingfish senator makes one remark that helps to explain his rise to power. Says he:

"I'm not afraid of anything but the people."

He is now member of an organization that, as a general thing, is less afraid of the people than of anything else.

ROOSEVELT AND President Hoover have talked, and it is said they agree on a "discussion of the war debts with Great Britain."

When it comes to talking, as we learned during the Washington conference, the British are champions. That talk probably will cost the United States a good many dollars per word.

A STRANGE discovery described by the very sincere scientist, Dr. Albert Einstein, as a miracle, is the change in certain metallic alloys at low temperature, approaching the "Kelvin" temperature, three degrees from the point where all heat vanishes. In this extreme cold, more than 400 below zero, certain alloys offer absolutely NO RESISTANCE to the passage of electric current.

This may help to explain how the warmth and light of the sun comes through 93,000,000 miles of ether at absolute zero without loss of power. Dr. Goetz, conducting experiments that amaze the learned Einstein, hopes to produce a steel alloy 200 times harder than any known. With that, cutting steel rails would be like cutting cheese with an ordinary knife, and shaving off forests like shaving a beard.

THE BRITISH have an idea that cheap money is not a bad thing. New Zealand will inflate to the tune of 25 per cent.

Canada is considering inflation to put her dollar in line with the British pound, and out of line with our "high hat" golden coin.

Perhaps there is something about money that our "best minds" don't know. Our business looks as though that might be the case.

PROF. HUNTINGTON, who does research at Yale, tells the American Birth Control League that birth control does not diminish the number of children born of the ablest parents. Statistics from Yale and Harvard prove "an ultimate increase of descendants of the leaders of the group."

More important, there will always be large increases in the groups that pay little attention to birth control, and produced such men as Franklin, Lincoln, Edison and others that were useful.

BRASSEY'S NAVAL Shipping Manual, just out, says our biggest American battleships, Colorado, Maryland and West Virginia, amount to little.

"The speed is low, the main armament of 16-inch guns is less in number than in British ships, the horizontal protection appears weak, and the unarmored forward end of the vesse' could be shot away near the water line."

Our admiral, William D. Pratt, chief of naval operations, does not dispute the statements. He says:

PAIR NAMED IN MURDER AND ARSON CHARGES

Insurance Adjuster, Druggist Give Selves Up

Sam Neaman, 42, an insurance adjuster, of 2241 Brownsville road, and Paul Childs, 29, a druggist, of 3834 Beechwood boulevard, were being held in Central station today for Cleveland authorities in connection with the Ellington apartment blaze in which 13 lives were lost.

Pittsburgh sleuths are searching for a third man, Ben Hirsch, of Aliquippa, an insurance adjuster, who, along with Neaman, Childs and L. J. Kamons, former Pittsburgh tobacco man, and Ray I. Turk, of Cleveland, were indicted yesterday by a Cleveland grand jury on murder and arson charges.

Safety Director Frank J. Merrick, of Cleveland, charged Turk with hiring a professional arson gang to set fire to his barber supply shop in the apartment building so he could collect insurance. Turk was arrested in Akron today.

TWO SENTENCED

Kamons and his son, Abbon, were sentenced to Rockview Penitentiary in September following their conviction for perpetrating the fire which destroyed an Ambridge shoe store Christmas eve, 1931. The Ohio governor asked Pennsylvania authorities to stay any possibility for Kamon's release until Ohio authorities had presented their case.

After warrants for the arrest of

GUNMAN BEATS AGED CRIPPLE

Slugged into insensibility during the holdup and robbery of his store shortly before last midnight, an aged McKeesport man regained consciousness and crawled to the street, where he was found by a passerby and removed to a physician's office.

Thomas Carroll, 61, of 627 Walnut street, McKeesport, a cripple, told police he was alone in his candy kitchen when a man entered and asked to make a purchase. When he turned his back to the "customer," he said, the man drew a gun and ordered him to throw up his hands. He was slugged from behind as he stood with his hands above his head, he told police.

Regaining consciousness while the man looted cash registers in the store, he was again slugged into insensibility, police said.

He crawled to the street, where he was found by a passerby, who carried him to the office of Dr. J. J. Donoghue. Police were unable to determine the amount of loot taken from the store.

Awarded $9,000 Verdict in Her Suit

LEG BENT, SHE WINS $9,000

Mrs. Garnet Parsons, 43-year-old Punxsutawney widow, was awarded $9,000 in Common Pleas Court today in a suit against Allen V. Ross, of Butler and Beaver Falls, for treatment which resulted in permanent injury to her left leg.

Ross, a natureopath and not a licensed physician, she claimed, bent her leg on October 10, 1929, in Beaver Falls, until her foot touched her ears. Mrs. Parsons said she was under anesthetic at the time and was being treated for what Ross claimed was a dislocation.

She testified that because of severe twisting the treatment resulted in a fracture of the femur. The fracture left her left leg from one and a half to two inches shorter than the right one, and she is compelled to use a crutch and cane when she walks, it was testified. The injury she said affected her making a living.

Tornado Wrecks Texas Town, Hurts 30

PARIS, TEX., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Thirty persons were injured, six seriously, in a tornado which last night flattened the hamlet of Manchester, on the Red River, 40 miles northeast of Paris.

Ten buildings were demolished at Manchester, including the church and the school building.

GEORGE MOORE, NOVELIST, DIES

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—George Moore, the famous Irish novelist, died at 6 a. m. today. He would have been 81 next month.

Moore died in his widely-known home in Ebury street. He was seriously ill only a few days, but his health had been failing for some time.

Despite his advanced years and impaired health, Moore was active in the literary field almost to the end. He left an uncompleted task in which he was greatly engrossed—the editing and supervising of a complete edition of his works.

He also left an unfinished "modern" novel, a little more than half of which he had written.

By JIMMY (TARZAN) CORCORAN

International News Service.

WOLF ISLAND, Mo., Jan. 21.—What concerns me most as this is being handed to a carrier pigeon from tree No. 16 is just how low it will take the lions to catch up with the hunters.

At present the brutes are hunting the hunters instead of visa versa, as was "Bring 'Em Back Dead" Wright's fond hope when he deposited the behemoths here early in the week. We are hunting in self defense.

This morning the lions were still alive, but I am not so sure about the hunters.

The night was filled with the snorts of the wild beasts as they rubbed their beaks on the barbed wires that were supposed to protect us in case the guests had a change of heart. Well, no one got any sleep, because you can't hop into the arms of Morpheus very well with one of the beasts wheezing around your bunk and the rain beating off your mib.

Early last evening there was quite a battle to see how many of us could fit into the lions' cage.

Neither Pat nor Mike seem to be particularly anxious to invade our private quarters again. They are tired of looking at us.

FUMES KILL SOHO G. O. P. LEADER

Patrick McKnight and Daughter Overcome; Girl Recovers

Patrick McKnight, 50, veteran Soho Republican leader, today was fatally stricken and his daughter, Madeline, 20, was overcome, in their home, 2327 Fifth avenue. Gas fumes were blamed, but the Coroner's office planned a blood test to determine the exact cause.

McKnight had gone to the basement to examine a new water boiler. He staggered into the kitchen a few minutes later, complaining of feeling ill. Upon his request for orange juice, Miss McKnight said she opened the door leading to the basement, to obtain oranges.

She was overcome in a few minutes. Upon regaining consciousness, she found McKnight on the floor beside her. Others in the house were summoned, but McKnight died before the arrival of a physician.

McKnight was long a Republican leader in the Soho district. He leaves, besides his daughter, two sons, John and Felix McKnight. He was an uncle of Mrs. Frances Jackson, wife of Deputy Coroner W. M. Jackson.

RAIDING POLICE NIP POLITICIANS

One of the ports for missing girls, according to state police, was closed last night when eight state troopers from Greensburg raided the house of Lillian Smith, 469 Third avenue, Homestead, and arrested 14 girls and 14 men. Among the latter were several McKeesport politicians, police said.

Today the girls, none over 25 years, were finger printed and photographed in McKeesport Police Station by a Bertillon expert from the Greensburg station. The 28 prisoners were taken to McKeesport, where three, giving fictitious names, obtained release on bail.

Kills Wife and Self In Fight Over Cards

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Quarreling as they returned from a card party, Louis Werner, 45, a truck driver, shot his wife to death in their home early today, then shot himself. He died an hour later in a hospital.

Mrs. Margaret Deller, 20, daughter of the Werners, witnessed the tragedy and called authorities.

The Small American 72d Congress

VETERAN State Senator William Martin, of North Dakota, offered a resolution in the Senate of that state on Monday urging North Dakota and other Western states to withdraw from the union.

Doubtless the seditious Seventy-second Congress will approve of this action.

Perhaps they will pass a measure turning over the western part of America to Japan, as they have turned over the Philippines.

It is possible the members of the un-American Seventy-second Congress would be willing to abandon the Louisiana Purchase also.

Why have a country bigger than their brains?

This country was built to greatness, by far-seeing statesmen who added to the original thirteen states the vast Louisiana territory; the great Northwest territory and then California and the Southwest; and then our island possessions.

THESE ISLANDS alone, embracing 125,000 square miles, a territory greater and richer than the combined area of seven American states, are of incalculable importance by virtue of their geographical positions, great wealth of soil and mines, and infinite possibilities of commerce and production.

In the great days of our republic the economic and military values of these islands were foreseen and appreciated.

But now the nation has come upon dismal days.

There comes a time in the history of all nations, even the greatest, when lack of imagination and lack of patriotic devotion on the part of the citizenry, coupled with a lack of capacity and lack of loyalty on the part of the government, start the nation upon its disintegration and decline.

PERHAPS OUR nation has reached it zenith.

Surely it has, if the political pygmies now in control at Washington have their own weak way.

These microscopic Americans have no concern for the greatness and glory of the United States.

Having turned the Philippines over to Japan, now perhaps the Seventy-second Congress will add to its black record by abandoning those other parts of the country which were added to the nation in its days of development, and get back to the original thirteen states.

It was not a SATIRIST but a REALIST who wrote:

"How I could love my country if it were not for my countrymen."

London Bus Strike Paralyzes Traffic

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(INS.)—Fully one-half of London's transport system was paralyzed today as the bus men's strike assumed serious proportions.

With hundreds of additional bus employes refusing to work, 10,000 men and 1,891 buses were affected by the strike. Although the walkout is still unofficial, leaders predict a general strike momentarily unless the company withdraws its allegedly unfair running schedules.

'Rubber Baby' Falls Out Window, Unhurt

ASTORIA, Ore., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Rudd, of Seaside, believe they have the original "rubber baby."

Their 18-month-old son fell from a second-story window of the Rudd home to the frozen ground 14 feet below. His mother rushed downstairs to find he had walked unconcernedly back into the house. Examination failed to reveal even a slight bruise.

JAP GENERAL INJURED IN BOMBING

Tokio Stands Firm on Policy and Warns Chinese

SHANGHAI, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—There were persistent reports here today that Chang Hsia-Hsu, premier of Manchukuo, had been killed in a bombing at the Changchun Railway station and that Gen. Muto, supreme representative of Japan in Manchukuo, had been seriously injured.

It was impossible to verify the reports immediately because of the Japanese censorship on press dispatches.

CHINESE BOMBED

TUNGLIAO, Manchuria, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—For the third time this week, Japanese airplanes raided and bombed Chinese troop concentrations early today in the Kailu district of Jehol province. The planes inflicted heavy punishment, it was reported at this Japanese military base.

Japanese declared their air raids into the Chinese administrative state were to forestall raids upon three railroads centering at this point and to forestall an attack on this city.

JAPAN FIRM ON STAND

TOKIO, Jan. 21.—(INS.)—Addressing the opening session of the Japanese Diet, Foreign Minister Count Yasuya Uchida served notice on the world today that Japan will keep to her announced policy in the Far East.

He said Japan would continue to aid the new government of Manchukuo in acquiring its "rightful frontiers" and in suppressing banditry within these borders.

ACTION BEGINS ON DEBT DEAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Diplomatic machinery was set in full motion on both sides of the Atlantic today to bring the United States and Great Britain together early in March for a new examination of war debts.

Powered by a joint agreement between President Hoover and his successor-elect, Franklin D. Roosevelt, the turning wheels opened the way for the appointment of a British mission to meet American representatives here soon after March 4 for a prompt attack on the stumbling block of international obligations.

LINDSAY INFORMED

Within a few hours after the incoming and outgoing chief executives had decided upon diplomatic channels—advocated by Mr. Roosevelt—as the avenue for an approach to the problem, Secretary Stimson summoned the Eng-

Norman Weds as Bride Waits Papal Annulment

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(INS.)—Montagu Norman, 61, governor of the Bank of England, and Mrs. Priscilla Worsthorne, 33-year-old divorcee, were married in the Chelsea registry office today.

As customary in all Norman's affairs, the ceremony was cloaked in strictest secrecy.

The nuptial knot was tied at exactly 8:25 a. m., while the majority of Londoners were still eating breakfast.

Announcement yesterday that the couple intended to wed took social circles by surprise. The bride of the banker, who was known as an invincible bachelor, is a vivacious blonde and the mother of two sons.

Mrs. Worsthorne, who received a divorce from Alexander Louis Wynand-Koch Worsthorne in 1929, applied to the Vatican for a papal annulment of the marriage after her romance with Norman began.

Her plea, taken to Pope Pius through Cardinal Bourne, was considered by the special Vatican tribunal that deals with all mixed marriages. Her first husband was not a Catholic.

THOMAS TAKING ROLE GIVEN UP BY KINGFISH

Senate Leaders Predict Passage Next Week Despite Opposition

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The fate of the Glass banking reform bill was again clouded with uncertainty today as Senator Thomas (Dem.), of Oklahoma, threatened a new filibuster to prevent its enactment.

Thomas voiced this threat after declaring the bill was "iniquitous and should never be passed." He assailed it as a measure designed to put a few big bankers in control of the nation's credit resources.

Senator Huey P. Long, the Louisiana "Kingfish," who abandoned a filibuster after the Senate refused to gag him, declared he had nothing to do with Thomas' filibuster. Long professed to be devoting all his time to getting the bill enacted, with amendments limiting branch banking by national banks to states which grant a like privilege to state banks.

Senator Watson, Republican floor leader, and Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader, both declared the bill would pass the Senate by next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Senator Carter Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, father of the bill, was angered by the threat of another further delay. He said:

"There is evidence the filibuster has been resumed. I am going to try to get night sessions next week to force a vote and if that fails, the only way we can pass this bill is by adopting cloture."

Thomas replied:

"Cloture is out of order. We are proceeding under a unanimous consent agreement and they can't gag us now."

COUNTY TO BUY NO MORE CARS FOR OFFICIALS

Commissioners Rule Against Autos in Job Of Cutting Budget

The County Commissioners do not intend to buy a single automobile during 1933 and many county officials now riding in county-owned machines soon will be using trolleys and buses, the Commissioners announced today as they renewed their efforts to slash $3,000,000 from the budget estimates of $20,151,714.37.

To date there has been $246,536.27 cut from the estimates of several departments, with no mention of what may be cut when the question of salaries is taken up. At yesterday's session the Commissioners cut $139,285.02, the biggest amount coming from the maintenance of the Courthouse.

Judge James R. Macfarlane, president judge of Common Pleas Court, who appeared before the Commissioners, stated that he was willing, and had been willing for some time, to meet with other county officials to discuss the question of salary retrenchment.

Common Pleas Court suggested a loud-speaking system to page lawyers and court attaches in the corridors. The County Court wanted $500 for a Christmas party, but this may be taken up later.

The Commissioners voted to create a position for a clerk whose duties would be to see that the various department did not spend money for something for which it was not appropriated.

Woodside Demands Right To Conduct Hearing

A firm stand by Controller Robert G. Woodside on his right to conduct the hearing on the charges he has made involving the administration of the County Commissioners is generally expected at the Courthouse.

Archibald Powell, Woodside's solicitor, and J. P. Fife, county solicitor, have agreed to discuss plans for the adjourned hearing as soon as they can get a full stenographic report of the Friday meeting, at which Controller and Commissioners laid claims to their right to preside.

Woodside yesterday reiterated his statement that the Main & Co. auditors employed by the Commissioners no longer have his official support in entering the various departments.

The Controller's decision does not definitely bar the auditors, it was pointed out. It does make it possible for a department head to raise an objection to the auditors coming into his office without the Controller's sanction.

Main & Co., auditors, who are working in many of the county departments, said late yesterday they had experienced no trouble and expected none.

Chairman Charles C. McGovern has said he believes the Commissioners have the right to audit every department for which they appropriate money.

ACTION BEGINS ON WAR DEBT CONFERENCE

lish Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and informed him of the agreement reached yesterday afternoon by the two leaders in an extraordinary White House conference.

That was the first step in the new negotiations which may lead to a general review of debts owed by all foreign nations which have met their regular installments.

News that America and Great Britain would sit down and talk it over was received enthusiastically in European capitals. There was little immediate comment from leaders of Congress, but there were some private expressions against cancellation or reduction.

In London the expectation was general that that government would accept the invitation to name envoys. And as soon as they are named and arrive in Washington, the new Democratic administration will tackle its first major international problem.

MONTH SAVED

To Mr. Roosevelt the arrangements mean the saving of a month in seeking a path to improved world economic conditions. The Hoover-Roosevelt agreement also provides for a discussion of economic problems, and there was speculation that the new President might make the talks with Great Britain the basis for tariff concessions as a means of opening up markets for American products.

Mr. Roosevelt was in the South today, but he left Secretary Stimson to carry out the preliminary negotiations. From the South came word that the Democratic leader does not regard France's failure to pay on December 15 as a default, but rather as a deferment. Should that nation or any other which failed to pay meet its payment it, too, might be accorded a separate opportunity to present petitions for re-examination.

However, any new agreements or alterations of existing obligations must be approved by Congress. In that connection it was observed that Mr. Roosevelt has considered the calling of a special session about mid-April. This circumstance conceivably could result in congressional approval of a new debts basis before June 15, the next payment date, when $144,000,000 is due from the debtor countries.

Debt Talk Set, Roosevelt Turns to 'Shoals' Problem

EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT-ELECT ROOSEVELT TO WARM SPRINGS, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Surrounded by power experts, President-elect Roosevelt today turned from the vexing foreign problems to a personal study of disposition of the gigantic Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate plant.

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, Republican Independent leader who has waged the long contest in Congress for government operation and control of this plant, was at Mr. Roosevelt's side for the inspection trip.

Chamberlain Expected To Head Debt Mission

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS
International News Service.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, will head the British delegation to be sent to the United States as a result of the Hoover-Roosevelt war debt invitation, it was stated authoritatively today.

If domestic problems make this impossible, it was said, Stanley Baldwin, former Conservative Premier who negotiated the present war debt settlement, may be called upon to head the mission.

Under present plans, Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald will not make the journey unless absolutely necessary.

Man Wins Divorce Charges Wife Drank

His wife drank to excess, frequently went out at night and called him vile names, Edgar S. Morrow, of 1206 Morrow street, Wilkinsburg, testified in obtaining a divorce from Mrs. Mary Morrow, Mayflower street.

Mrs. Morrow contested the suit, but Judge Samuel H. Gardner decided that while the testimony did not warrant a divorce on cruelty charges, it did show indignities, and granted the decree on those grounds.

'Buy American' Plea Made by Citizens Here

'Man on Street' Aids Movement to Spur U. S. Industry

Where his decision has particularly counted—at the store counter—he has decided in no uncertain terms that American-made goods are his choice.

In the mail, daily the Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers sponsoring "Buy American" receive pledges of faith in the movement, and hopes that it will attain its objective—jobs and orders for the factories.

NEW YEAR RESOLVE

Among citizens who have written comments on "Buy American" are Ray Neapolitan, of Braddock, who sends in a pledge to "Buy American" with this comment:

"I made my resolution for 1933—it's 'Buy American.'"

Miss Sally Waldorf, of Federal street, North Side, wrote:

"I was born in Moscow, Russia, and came here when aged 5. I'm not a native American, but I can say I belong to the class of 'true Americans.' I believe in 'Buy American.' From now on, it's to be my guide."

Lieut. Raymond E. Kraus, of Fisk street, wrote:

"'Buy American' has always been my policy ever since I returned from France following the war, regardless whether it be an electric bulb or an English broadcloth shirt."

HELPS MANUFACTURERS

Many of the ideas coming out of the campaign have turned a penny for manufacturers. The latest is a series of advertising novelties being made by the Ingram Richardson Manufacturing Company, of Beaver Falls. D. M. Cook, agent, showed "Buy American" ash trays of red, white and blue, and license tag clips—both of vitrified porcelain. Many have written words for songs.

Senator James J. Davis has introduced a bill in the United States Senate to keep out of this country competitive foreign-made goods that can be purchased by Americans. The Senate Commerce Committee favorably reported the bill.

Reports from Canada show the dominion's 1931 imports from the United States were $407,000,000 and in 1932 dropped to $271,000,000—indicating they bought $138,000,000 less goods following the "Buy British" campaign.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS

A series of evangelistic meetings will be held in Point Breeze Presbyterian Church, Fifth and Penn avenues, every night from January 22 to 29. The Rev. William S. Hawks, of Binghamton, N. Y., will preach.

A chorus choir, under the direction of Frank Adams, will furnish music. There also will be special music by the Zion Male Quartet and other quartets at these meetings.

Homestead Council Fights Assessments

Homestead Council voted last night to petition Common Pleas Court for reassessment of properties in Seventh, Eighth and Ninth avenues. The motion was made after Burgess John J. Cavanaugh declared properties were overassessed in the First and Second wards and under-assessed in other districts.

The Fire and Light Committee presented a suggestion for the saving of approximately $3,500 by the elimination of certain street lights.

2 MOTHERS SUE FOR CHILDREN

Legal battles to obtain possession of their daughters have been launched in Common Pleas Court by two mothers through habeas corpus proceedings.

Mildred Lander, a divorcee, of 814 Adelaide street, said Doris May Brooks, 6, was being deprived of her liberty by Thomas W. and Bertha Birch, of 2034 Pioneer avenue. Judge Elder W. Marshall fixed the hearing for Monday morning.

Mrs. Mary Flit brought action to obtain possession of Arlene Gross, 10, now in custody of Mrs. James Walter, 930 Railroad street, Heidelberg. The child is a daughter of Mrs. Flit by a former marriage.

Bowling Alley Man, Kline Rival, Fined

H. R. Garber, proprietor of the Elba Recreation Bowling Alleys, 319 Fifth avenue, was fined $25 in Central Police Court today after a raid based on a charge of being open after midnight in violation of a city ordinance. Thirty-three patrons also arrested were discharged. Garber was a candidate for Mayor against Mayor Charles H. Kline in 1925, police recalled.

Msgr. O'Shea Named As Seattle Bishop

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Pope Pius today nominated Msgr. John O'Shea, of the Diocese of Hartford, Conn., as bishop of Seattle, Wash.

Mayview Building Already Houses Men

The city's new $40,000 utility building at the Mayview Home and Hospital is complete except for installation of plumbing fixtures, Mrs. Enoch Rauh, welfare director, announced today. She said approximately 70 homeless men are already using the building for sleeping quarters. It can house approximately 700.

Dr. Marcy Heads Tuberculosis Society

Dr. C. Howard Marcy, superintendant of the Tuberculosis League Hospital here, was re-elected president of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society at the closing session of its annual convention in Lancaster. Resolutions asking the State Legislature to provide the State Health Department with adequate funds were adopted.

MRS. ROOSEVELT FLYING WEST

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left by airplane today to make a speech tonight in Chicago at a meeting of the League of Women Voters.

The plane, a regular United Air Lines ship, was due in Chicago at 4:47 p. m., Eastern Standard time.

There was a possibility Mrs. Roosevelt would have to change to a train at Cleveland as unfavorable weather was reported between Cleveland and Chicago.

Mrs. Roosevelt planned to return to New York by air tomorrow.

Balloonist Predicts Ocean Airship Trade

The dirigible is the aircraft of the sea lanes, and if impending legislation is passed by Congress, it will get full status and go in the sea trade, Ward T. Van Orman, famous balloonist, yesterday told members of the Aero Club of Pittsburgh.

The club, meeting in the William Penn Hotel, heard Van Orman tell of his experiences in the recent international balloon race in Basil, Switzerland, in which he came in second, and his travel of 20,000 miles in 60 days by railroad, boat, balloon, dirigible and airplane.

NEW CLUE HITS BROWN 'SUICIDE'

PALMYRA, N. J., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Failure of servants to identify a hat found in Bradway Brown's garage soon after his body was discovered in the living room of his home indicated, police said today, the presence of at least one other man at the scene the night the young Philadelphia businessman was fatally shot.

The hat, three sizes smaller than that usually worn by Brown, lay only a few feet from the victim's. At first, the smaller hat was identified by Ellis Parker, chief of Burlington County detectives, as having been purchased by Brown by mistake. His wife and two servants, however, said they had never seen it before.

Chief of Police Morris Beck, of Palmyra, insists Brown was killed by "hired assassins," but Parker has clung to the suicide theory.

Merger, Reopening Of 2 Banks Delayed

Possible announcement of the opening of a new bank merging the closed Diamond and Monongahela National banks will be postponed until the first of February, according to a report made public by the reorganization committee of the bank today.

The opening is delayed because the sale of 14,000 shares of stock at $75 a share has not been completed.

to foreclose until the Legislature has time to enact laws on the subject.

What would happen if all debts in the United States were canceled over night. Many Americans, rich four years ago, would at first be uncertain whether it would help or hurt them. It would not make much difference in the long run, and it certainly would help business. But it is an impossibility.

D. A. R. Snub to Defense Parley Stirs Feud

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Withdrawal of the Daughters of the American Revolution from the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, to be held here January 30, has thrown into a turmoil of talk the whole forefront of women's "peace" and "defense" causes.

It brought into sharp clash with the Daughters their former coworker, the American Legion Auxiliary. It started a buzz about inner D. A. R. workings. It won applause from yesterday's closing session on the Cause and Cure of War Conference.

On motion of Mrs. William Louis Dunne, historian general and publicity chairman, the Daughters voted last October to withdraw for the year 1933, from the conference, in which hitherto they had been the leaders.

Economy was the reason given in the resolution. Mrs. William Russell Magna, the president, said she had received hundreds of letters from women saying that, with their own congress to attend here in April, they could not afford to come to Washington in January to talk national defense, a policy to which the Daughters are definitely committed anyhow.

Mrs. S. Alford Blackburn, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, called Mrs. Magna's action a "double cross" and said her group would hold the conference whether or not.

'Prince Mike' Crashes Beaux-Arts Ball in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Shortly before dawn dappled Park avenue today, "Prince Mike Romanoff" flicked a speck from his long-tailed coat, called for his hat and stick and went home from the beaux-arts ball.

A trace of satisfaction was discernible beneath the Bronx nobleman's hauteur, for he had kept a promise of eight months' standing. The last time immigration men shooed him from these shores his parting words were:

"I'll be back, muh lads, to attend the beaux-arts ball."

In the crowd at the door a man who said that when he was younger and more trusting he had lent the "prince" some money, ventured to address him:

"Hah ya, Mike?"

Said the "prince," glaring glassily:

"Who speaks to a Romanoff?"

Then he sauntered into New York's most elaborate social affair. Most of the guests were in costume, but not Romanoff, who is otherwise known as Harry F. Gerguson.

Gerguson, an orphan lad whose career as "the morganatic son of Tsar Nicholas III" and "graduate of Harvard, Yale, Eton, Oxford and Cambridge" gave two continents a chuckle and authorities a headache, is awaiting sentence on a charge of entering this county illegally.

AMERICAN SHIP CREW HEROES IN RESCUE

Captain of Doomed Vessel and Three Others Die

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The American Merchant knifed through evil, green seas today, bearing toward this port a hero and 22 sailors he saved from one of the North Atlantic's maddest fits.

Capt. Giles Stedman, rugged seadog from Quincy, Mass., expected to get his ship here by Tuesday with the survivors of the crew of the tiny British freighter Exeter City, crushed to a sinking mass of wreckage in a terrifying storm yesterday. The skipper of the Exeter City, believed to be Capt. E. D. Legg, was swept to death with his third officer and two men.

GAINS NEW GLORY

New glory for the United States Merchant Marine redounded from the feat of Capt. Stedman, who in 1925 saved 28 men from the Italian steamship Ignazio Florio. Then he was chief officer of the liner President Harding.

The Exeter City, bound for Portland, Me., was about 600 miles east of Cape Race, Newfoundland, at dawn yesterday when she sent out the SOS which was intercepted about 15 miles away by the American Merchant, plowing westbound with passengers and freight.

SPEED TO AID

It was a difficult task to turn a ship in those gigantic waves, but Stedman did, and three hours later the helpless Exeter City was seen. Bridge, chartroom and part of the salon gone, her number 2 hatch bashed, she even then was settling. Sleet drove like shrapnel under lowering clouds.

The seas foiled an attempt to launch a lifeboat, snatching one boat to destruction. At last the all-day battle to link the two ships succeeded.

Coraopolis House Levelled Today by Explosion and Fire

THE LEVELLED RUINS OF THE CASASANTA HOME, 718 SIXTH AVENUE, CORAOPOLIS . . . . . THE FIRE SPREAD, DAMAGED THE HOUSE TO THE REAR

HELD FOR PROBE IN BLAST, FIRE

Guy Casasanta, 45, of 720 Sixth avenue, Coraopolis, today was being detained by Coraopolis police for questioning in connection with an explosion and fire that destroyed his home, damaged an adjoining house and drove eight persons out in their night clothing.

The blast, of undetermined origin, ripped through the two-story frame house occupied by Casasanta and the fire following leaped to the double dwelling adjoining, owned by Dominick Devenzio. The latter housed Percy Keck, his wife, Marie, and their four children, Betty, 5; Paul, 4; Ernest, 2, and Percy, Jr., 1, and Mr. and Mrs. James Cameron. They fled.

Casasanta told police he was at work when the explosion occurred and his wife and eight children were visiting in Ambridge. The total damage was estimated at $12,000.

'CRIME' ARGUED IN TRUNK CASE

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The question of dismissing a charge against John J. Halloran, wealthy lumberman, of being an accessory in the Winnie Ruth Judd "trunk murder" case depends on the state's ability to show this his blonde young accuser actually committed a crime in killing two women, the committing magistrate ruled in Halloran's preliminary hearing yesterday.

Mrs. Judd, condemned to die, has insisted, as the state's chief witness during the hearing, that she killed Mrs. Agnes Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson in self-defense.

The magistrate, Superior Judge J. C. Niles, made his pronouncement after defense counsel moved for dismissal of the charge against Halloran.

The court held Halloran is not bound by the state's previous proceedings against Mrs. Judd, in which she was sentenced to be hanged February 17 for murder of Mrs. Leroi.

If it was really a case of self-defense, the court told County Attorney Renz L. Jennings, no crime was committed and therefore Halloran "can be no accessory to crime." The court took the dismissal motion under advisement until today.

Murder Suspect To Fly Shackled From Coast

Louis Dalo, alias Scratow, will return here from Los Angeles by airplane next week to stand trial for the murder of Charles Weddles, McKeesport road barbecue proprietor, District Attorney Andrew T. Park has announced.

On the flight the prisoner will be secured in an "iron boot," known in the West as the Oregon boot. The device has been used here for 30 years. It is a 25-pound ball of steel locked over the ankle.

Dalo is charged with participating in the holdup of the barbecue in March, 1930, when Weddles was killed. Louis Zemler, convicted as an accomplice in the slaying, is serving a life sentence.

WIFE ADMITS BABY HOAX

DETROIT, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—A 29-year-old wife today had admitted she deceived her husband into accepting an adopted baby as his own son.

She is Mrs. Harriet Edna Knapp, who was sued for divorce yesterday by Patrolman Charles F. Knapp. The husband made the deception one of the bases of his suit, but said he would adopt the child provided his wife were not a party to the adoption.

Mrs. Knapp said love for children and her realization that she could not have a child of her own led to the hoax.

Not until Mrs. Knapp attempted to obtain a second child through a similar pretense did the husband grow suspicious and discover that the birth certificate of the baby was not recorded. Then he learned the baby was adopted last May 12. It was born, records revealed, last January 26.

FORD HANDED WRIT AT DANCE

DETROIT, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—For the first time in many years, Henry Ford has been subpenaed to testify in a legal action.

Information that the 69-year-old magnate has been summoned to appear before a notary to give testimony in a suit involving his company came today from Wilfrid C. Leland, son of the founder of the Lincoln Motor Company, purchased several years ago by Ford.

Leland revealed he personally had slipped unnoticed into an old-fashioned dancing party at which Ford was a guest, and handed him the subpena before he realized its nature. The Lincoln company was founded by the late Henry M. Leland.

The suit, originally started by the Ford company against the Sweeten Automobile Company, of Philadelphia, is an outgrowth of six years of legal action, which involved the Sweeten company, Ford and Leland. It grew out of the purchase of the Lincoln company by Ford, although it is a side-issue in the purchase.

SUING HUSBAND LAYS LETTERS TO STILLMAN

3 Missives Signed by 'Jim' Form Basis Of Balm Suit

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Three letters signed "Jim," and allegedly written by James A. Stillman, wealthy banker, to vivacious Mrs. Marjorie Rochefort, will form the basis of Luc Rochefort's $200,000 alienation of affections suit against the former head of the National City Bank, it developed today.

The letters, together with photostatic copies, were turned over to Alfred Becker, Rochefort's attorney, by the former Montreal politician yesterday. Beyond declaring the missives would be his "ace in the hole" in his court action against the financier, Rochefort declined to discuss them.

One of the letters was said to have been sent to Mrs. Rochefort from the Stillman home in Park avenue, another from the Paris branch of the National City Bank and the third from the Havana branch. All were said to be postmarked between June and September, 1931.

Rochefort also was scanning passenger lists of a steamship company for supporting material for his suit.

According to him, one list showed Stillman, Mrs. Rochefort and her mother sailed for Havana on September 5, following the reported correspondence with the banker.

Becker said he would go to court Monday and move for an order to inspect the affidavit of Astrid Haug, said to have introduced Mrs. Rochefort to the 62-year-old financier as a widow.

SCOTTI CLOSES CAREER IN TRIUMPH

Old Met Star Overcome By Emotional Tribute Of Great Audience

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—"Too many kisses . . . too many flowers. I am an old fool. I laugh . . . and I cry."

Flowers? They bloomed everywhere about his dressing room late yesterday as, with the singing of Chim-Fen in "L' Oracolo," he said adieu to his public—a public of 33 Metropolitan Opera seasons.

Kisses? They rained upon him. "May I kiss you?" cried the women, some young, many old. "Dear Scotti!" they murmured, crushing forward. "Sweet Scotti! May you live forever!"

Scotti laughed and cried.

FARRAR EMBRACED

There was Geraldine Farrar. They embraced happily, for they were pals; Scotti, Farrar and Caruso—they had been great friends.

There was Marcella Sembrich, she who had sung with Scotti that long-ago night of 1899 when Scotti made his debut at the Met. She came in on the arm of Morris Gest. She kissed Scotti, saying:

"Ah, Scotti, you are an artist always. You couldn't have been better than today, any time."

Scotti answered:

"Dear lady, I've never sung as well since you left."

Through the throng came a younger man. Scotti smiled happily and shouted:

"Ah, Larry, you ol' son of a gun!"

And Lawrence Tibbett, now at the zenith of his own operatic career, replied:

"You old son of a gun. I started my career with you. You mustn't go away. You can't."

As the final curtain had fallen on "L' Oracolo" and as the crowd was holding Scotti for 30 minutes of curtain calls, Lawrence Tibbett, in a box, had risen and in the deep baritone which only the night before had sung the role of "Emperor Jones" from the same stage, he sang:

"For He's A Jolly Good Fellow."

AUDIENCE SINGS

And soon many other voices in the audience joined in singing.

The famous theater was packed with people. Genius and wealth and music appreciation were represented.

Present, too, was the spirit of Scotti's dearest friend, Enrico Caruso, and the memories of Nellie Melba, Lillian Nordica and Edouard de Reszke.

Finally Scotti was ready to leave his dressing room—leave it forever. He said:

"For 33 years I have dressed here. Thirty-three years. Sad? Yes. Like a last kiss . . . like a first prayer for the dead."

GUNMEN SHOOT UNION CHIEF

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—(INS.)—Suffering from two bullet wounds, Daniel F. Cain, president of the Coal Teamsters' Union, today was placed under guard in a hospital here after gunmen made an unsuccessful attempt to murder the union chief.

Cain's assailants drove up abreast with the union chief's automobile in the crowded traffic in Garfield Park last night and opened fire with what police believe was a machine gun. Although wounded twice and weak from loss of blood Cain outdistanced his pursuers and sought medical aid.

Police announced the belief that the shooting marked the beginning of a campaign to eliminate the last of George (Red) Barker's associates from the union which Barker ruled until he was murdered last June.

OFFICER FIRES ON PROWLER

An alleged prowler was believed to have been shot by North Side police early today after he was chased from a fire escape at the home of E. W. Brennen, at 3831 Hiawatha street.

The suspect believed to be a youth, about 22, was fired upon by Patrolman Hugh Fredley when he refused to heed the officers' command to halt. Fredley said the youth staggered as he fired. A search of the neighborhood was made today for trace of the fugitive.

The prowler was detected on the fire escape by an occupant of the house who called police. As the emergency car of North Side Police Station approached, the youth fled.

Girl Sues Bandman's Widow for $100,000

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—(INS.)—The praecipe in a $100,000 damage suit against Mrs. Frances Schildhauer, widow of the mysteriously slain high school bandmaster, and her mother, Mrs. Louise Birkinshaw, had been filed here today by Miss Charlotte Pulland.

Auto Dashes Across Lawn, Driver Bruised

E. W. Long, 43, of 5471 Stanton avenue, suffered bruises when his automobile got beyond control and careened across the lawn at the home of Leonard Mazer, 2617 Beechwood boulevard, yesterday, police said.

Mrs. Anna Woernley, 65, of 1328 Wood street, Wilkinsburg, suffered rib fractures when an automobile driven by her daughter, Miss Irene Woernley, 23, collided with a car driven by Theodore Love, 21, of 114 Jefferson avenue, Vandergrift, at Dallas avenue and McPherson boulevard yesterday, police reported.

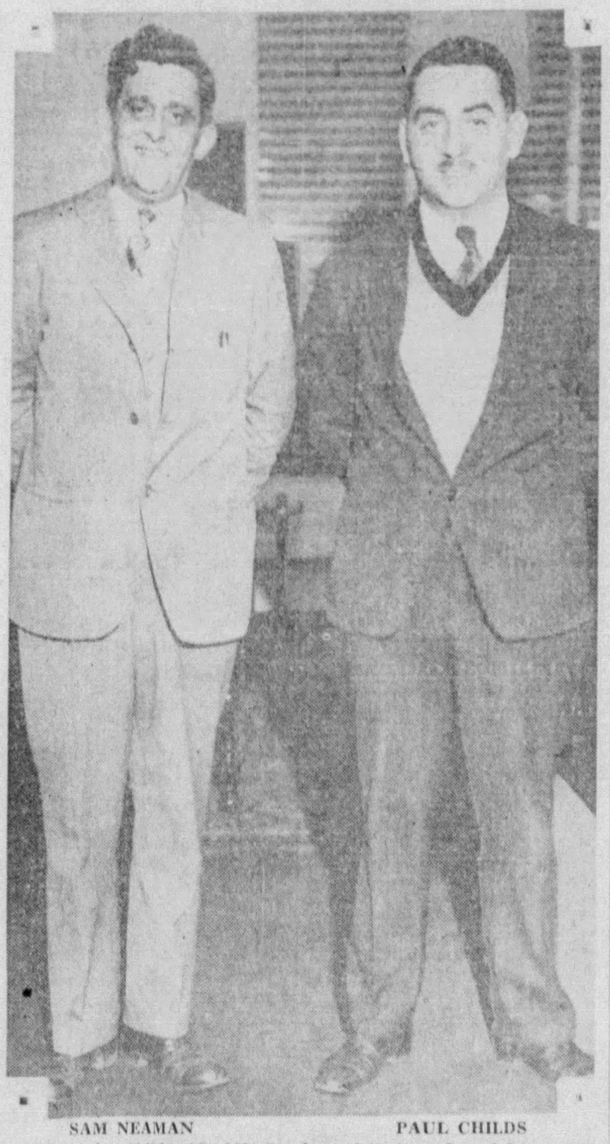
'Mr. Filibuster' Dupes Book Buyer

East End police today sought an alleged fake magazine salesman who fleeced W. H. Gladman, of 5838 Alderson street, of $2 January 3. Gladman told police he paid the man, who said he was "Mr. Filibuster," $2. He was promised magazines weekly, but received none, he said.

Winning Answers To Mother Question Appear Monday

The list of winners in the competition for best answers to the question propounded by Elsie Robinson, "Should an Unwed Mother Be Permitted to Keep Her Child?" will be published in the Monday Sun-Telegraph, together with a new question for answers, to which additional cash prizes will be paid.

INDICTED, SURRENDER



SAM NEAMAN PAUL CHILDS

Druggist Childs, 29, 3834 Beechwood boulevard, and Insurance Adjuster Neaman, 42, 2241 Brownsville road, pictured after they surrendered to Pittsburgh police after they heard they had been indicted in Cleveland for murder, arson in connection with the Ellington apartment fire, fatal to 13. the five had been issued in Cleveland, Pittsburgh police, Allegheny and Beaver County operatives were asked to aid in their apprehension.

Detective Frank Ferris said the two men had said they would waive extradition and return to Cleveland as soon as Ohio officers arrived here.

CALLED 'FRAME-UP'

Neaman, who said he had been informed of his indictment by a friend who read of it in a newspaper, described the charge as a frame-up, designed to put him out of business. Childs likewise declared he was innocent.

The Ellington fire was one of the worst disasters in Cleveland during the past three years. Two hundred residents of the downtown apartment building were in their beds when an explosion and fire wrecked the interior of one wing of the structure on the night of June 9.

Firemen from the first believed it was incendiary, but a grand jury investigation was dropped for lack of evidence. However, a secret investigation has been conducted since the night of the fire, authorities stated last night.

Hirsch, it was learned last night, disappeared from Aliquippa three months ago. Beaver County authorities are searching for him.

10 Held After Raid, Moonshine Seized

Nine men and a woman were under arrest in North Side Police Station today after a raid at 2829 Pennsylvania avenue, where police said they confiscated about 35 pints of moonshine whisky. Joseph Natoli, 21, was charged with keeping a disorderly house and the others with visiting a disorderly house.

Pedestrian Injured By Sidewalk Fall

Harvard Dean Guest At Dinner of Club

George H. Edgill will be a guest at a dinner of the Harvard Club of Western Pennsylvania in the Harvard-Yale-Princeton Club tonight. He is professor of fine arts and dean of the faculty of architecture at Harvard.

Driving From Dance Student Hits Man

John Haddock, 17, of 443 South Graham avenue, a Peabody High School student, was arrested early today on a charge of reckless driving after his car hit Morris Dickinson, 46, of 1415 Severn street, at Beechwood boulevard and Northumberland street. Dickinson was taken to Montefiore Hospital with a head injury.

Police said Haddock and companions were returning from a school dance.

Girl Visits Friends, Thieves Loot Room

When Betty Gray left her room at 521 Arch street to visit friends last night she forgot to lock her door, she told police. When she returned home early today her room had been ransacked and clothing valued at $50 stolen.

There was a further slight rise in the rivers. Stage at Franklin is 3.6 feet; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 13.1; Pittsburgh, 11.9; Dam No. 4, 9.5; No. 8, 9.1; No. 10, 9.5, and No. 12, 9.6. The dams are up.

FEAR COMPLEX BLAMED FOR CUT IN CHURCH 'TITHES'

PASTOR WARNS ON FURTHER REDUCTION

A "fear complex" and undue emphasis on the relative value of material things as compared to the spiritual, are responsible for the financial difficulties in which churches find themselves, it was declared by the Rev. Dr. Ralph H. Long, executive director of the National Lutheran Council at a recent session. Some of the results of the depression are apparent in the paring down of budgets, decrease in appropriations, impairing the work of the Church through shortage of funds, he continued. He said:

"Further reductions will result in permanent injury to many church enterprises. The amounts contributed for all church purposes by the Lutherans of America before the depression were so small that there should not have been any decrease."

He quoted figures showing that in 1931 Lutherans in the United States contributed $49,717,000 for congregational expenses and benevolences, while they spent $400,000,000 for automobiles alone; $26,500,000 for cosmetics; $12,250,000 for soft drinks; $17,500,000 for jewelry; $28,000,000 for cigarets, and $57,000,000 for chewing gum.

'Truth' to Be Topic Of Science Church

"Truth" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon to be read tomorrow in all Christian Science Churches. The golden-text will be: "I will praise Thee, O Lord, among the people: I will sing unto Thee among the nations. For Thy mercy is great unto the heavens, and Thy truth unto the clouds."

Dr. S. H. Goldenson To Discuss 'Faith'

"Can Man Live Without Faith?" will be the subject of Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson's sermon at the 11 a. m. services of the Rodef Shalom congregation tomorrow.

Broadcasting

DR. CLELAND B. M'AFEE

MISSION FIELDS BROADCAST

Missionaries of the Presbyterian church in foreign fields will receive messages from relatives and friends tonight in a broadcast from KDKA, beginning at 11:20.

The Rev. Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, former moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, will read the messages.

The Rev. Thomas C. Pears, Jr., of the Waverly Presbyterian Church, will preside. Music will be presented by Miss Mary Elizabeth Dickinson and Miss Helen Roessing, members of the Waverly Presbyterian Church Choir.

Following the missionary broadcast the "Polar Bears" will broadcast messages to dwellers in the Far North.

RADIO NEWS

'Our Family' On Air Tonight

LISTENING IN

Miss Renwick In Divorce Drama

The second of this week's American Weekly dramas, "Grounds for Divorce," with Katharine Renwick, radio, stage and screen actress, portraying the leading role, is presented on four stations in the Pittsburgh area tonight—WCAE at 7; KQV at 9:15; WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., at 5:30, and WMMN, Fairmont, W. Va., at 6.

Miss Renwick

The presentation, taken from an article appearing in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, reveals the various absurdities offered as grounds in the divorce courts. It is one of a series offered over more than 100 stations throughout the country by 17 Hearst newspapers, including the Sun-Telegraph.

"Our Family," long a WCAE Sunday feature, inaugurates a Saturday-at-8-schedule in response to popular request tonight.

Niagara Falls appears "in person" on the air for the last time this season on WJAS at 9:30.

Compositions by two of the youngest of contemporary composers, Philip James and Jaromir Weinberger, and selections from the works of Bach, Tchaikovsky, Mozart and Delius comprise the Boston Symphony Orchestra's program broadcast over an extensive NBC network including KDKA at 8:15 tonight. The James work, "Station WGBZX," a musical picture of a broadcasting station, won the NBC Orchestral Award last year. Weinberger is represented by Polka and Fugue from "Schwanda."

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Now that the depression plants have withered and died, jig-saw puzzles are in full bloom. A helpful Globe-Trotter remarks that if those interested in making big ones out of little ones would use a large desk blotter as a base, the pieces will not slip and come apart . . . saves wear and tear on the nerves.

Quick, Watson, the needle! A man's head and hand loomed out of the midnight darkness of a cellar door at Nick's Soda Grill on Brownsville road, near Arlington avenue, a bystander reported. . . . Five policemen rushed to the scene; one braved the cellar way; the others, with guns drawn, surrounded the building as 300 fear-gripped neighbors and passersby awaited developments . . . A gasp from the crowd—the officer reappears and with him his prisoner. It was Sis, the cat. The bystander could not be found, reports our Mt. Oliver correspondent, Nick O'Data.

Zelma O'Neill New 'Magic Rug' Star

The "Magic Carpet" sponsor is auditioning a new program—a musical comedy with Zelma O'Neill, Broadway comedienne, doing her stuff . . . Jack Fulton is plotting a new radio program idea, featuring Ted Pearson, the Chicago announcer, who was brought to New York to announce the various Whiteman broadcasts . . . and a new commercial show with Bill Gaxton and Victore Moore is due on the air very soon . . . The Three Sisters are playing vaude until a certain new series has its debut.

Miss O'Neill

Andrea Marsh is taking flying lessons from Red Engle, of Ted Weems' Orchestra, who's found time to become a licensed pilot in addition to playing saxophones, a violin, a clarinet, doing vocal refrains and taking the part of Kringelein on the Benny-Weems programs.

Playboy

And once they used to pour pale wine for me,
Sweet wine—and there were girls; so many friends . . .
I often wonder where they all can be;
Where do they vanish when a guy's luck ends?

I spent it while I had it, though; they all Know that. Too bad I couldn't have kept on—
But then we all were riding for a fall,
And what's the difference now?—the money's gone.

The money—yes, and most of life. Adieu
Rosy dreams that I would sometime mend.
I know it's much too late to start anew,
And so I sit alone and wait the end:

My home, a bench all dusty in the park;

"I've got a million dollars," said the nut, "and I don't know what to do with it—so let me write you out a check for half, huh?"

The cop tried to shoo him away.

"You think I'm crazy," persisted the fellow, "well, I'll show you!"

And so saying he produced a $10 bill and burned it.

"Gosh!" gosh'd the astonished officer, "burning a tenner? Bebbe you have a million at that!"

"You don't get the point, at all!" was the impatient man's reply, "I'm only trying to show you I'm not nuts!"

Of All Things!

Bernard David Morris reports that these signs are prominently displayed on an East Side Settlement House:

"No one admitted without a ticket!" . . . "Show your ticket before you enter!" . . . "No one admitted except members!"

The place is called "The Welcome House!"

Robert Braimes, an NBC musician, whose name we omitted when it was recorded in the skies, is a talented composer. They saved him from suicide a week ago. He had turned on the gas, after completing a jazz symphony, which he dedicated to Paul Whiteman, because he was unhappy. Braimes also scribbled on a magazine cover:

"So sorry, Walter Winchell, that I am a nobody, or this might make a good story for you."

Well, it makes a better story now. For on January 25th at Carnegie Hall—his jazz symphony will be played by—Paul Whiteman!

Things That Burn Me Up And Knock Me Cold

Paul Kelly, a capable actor, served a jail term in California for a crime. Long after he was incarcerated he was informed that if he could be paroled he would be hired for a stock company.

When the parole board heard that he could get a job in a show they decided "the theater would not be nice" for a paroled man. The fools! So Kelly got his parole by accepting a job driving a truck for $25 a week!

Not long ago Kelly appeared in a play, a hit for him. The movies then purchased it. The other day the movies offered him the same role at a grand salary, but some women's clubs heard of it and have sent Hollywood a petition demanding that Kelly not be engaged!

He's paid his debt to society, so what do the ladies want? Must a man be restrained from following his field of endeavor or making a better living because of some allegedly righteous women? I said allegedly!!!

Eddie Cantor Bullfight In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

That eminent matador, picador and banderillo, Signor Eddie Cantor, made his appearance yesterday at the Penn Theater in a picture called "The Kid from Spain," in which he turns his innocent eyes into saucers, soup-plates, dish-pans and harvest moons, to the dismay of a well-trained bull and the delectation of a happy audience. This picture is another flight into musical comedy, of which the Hollywoodlanders have been shy for some time—and this flight is very successful. It is based on a musical show seen here a few years ago, and with Eddie's part fattened it does very well. Also the real bull provides a thrilling climax. What a Carmen Eddie would make!

Mr. Seibel

The story concerns Eddie's forced trip to Mexico, pursued by a bull from the police force, who has a warrant for him, and when he gets to Mexico he is taken for the son of a famous bullfighter and has to make good. Trying to help his friend in a love-affair, he carries off the wrong girl, who happens to be the cute and roguish Lyda Roberti, and she falls in love with him.

Between the threats of Mexican bandits, the admiration of his friends, the pursuit of the sleuth with the warrant, and the wild charges of the bovine bull, Eddie has a series of narrow escapes—which do not deter him from singing several characteristic ballads in a voice somewhat inferior to that of the other Cantor, Rosenblatt.

The final scene in which he chloroforms the bull and that mighty beast collapses in slow motion, is a masterpiece of tauromachy.

Several beautifully managed ballets, one in a board school dormitory and the other in a Mexican night club, form the right framework for Eddie's expressive eyes and amusing antics. This is decidedly one of the better comedy films, though there are a few spots where the censor winked.

"Our Gang" are provided with a highly hilarious cake-baking comedy, and Walt Disney goes undersea to have mermaids abducted by pirates and rescued by devilfish and King Neptune. It is a diverting and ingenious bill from Eddie to the devilfish!

Film to Halo Radio City

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 21.—Out of the countless spires of stone and steel, there always has been one building which personified New York to the visitor.

Reflecting on this, H. N. Swanson, ex-Broadwayite, suddenly was struck with an idea. The Woolworth Building has had its day. The Empire State is an old story. Why not Radio City as a successor?

With every writer in Hollywood trying to hit on topical ideas, Swanson lost no time in making for the office of David Selznick, head man of RKO where he works.

Before he was fairly started, David Selznick was interested. By the time he was through, the idea was sold. Now the order has gone out to put a writer on the assignment.

Radio City will be immortalized in celluloid as well as in stone.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., leaves here today for New York and, despite what you're going to hear, it doesn't mean that Joan Crawford and he have separated. The object of Doug's visit is to see his mother, who has been ill, and to attend the opening of Noel Coward's play. He'll be gone two weeks, and he'll come back to his home and Joan's.

Broadways of the World
All in a Day
By Mark Hellinger

HOTEL ESPLANADE, BERLIN, Germany—Today, for a change, I am going to write a sob story. I heard it last night as I was seated in the lobby of this hotel chatting with a newly-made acquaintance. We talked about various things, as we sat there watching the people hurrying to and from the elevators. And when my friend commenced to unfold the yarn about Jake, I knew at last Hellinger had discovered a good old-fashioned sob story on his 'round-the-world jaunt. Here's the yarn as my friend told it to me:

Until two years ago, Jake lived in an old tenement on the lower East Side of New York. With him was his daughter, Dorothy. His wife had since gone. Dorothy was his only child—and, for all the world knew, his only relative.

Jake was not the modern, aggressive American. Far from it. He was of the old school. A quiet, easy going soul, he was content to live on the meager wages he received as the bookkeeper of an East Side sweatshop.

His daughter was the entire world to him. The child was only 4 years of age when her mother died—and Jake had been both parents to her from that day on.

When she was 12 years of age Jake sat her on his lap.

"Dorothy," he said, "you're getting to be a big girl. The first thing I know, you'll be coming home and telling papa that you've fallen in love with a handsome man."

The child tittered. And Jake caressed her tenderly.

Her father had no $2,000. It was a hundred to one that Jake would never have $2,000. But he liked the words as he spoke them. And after all, this child's marriage was so many years away . . .

* * *

Each year, with no more money than he possessed the year previous, Jake made the same promise on Dorothy's birthday. Soon she was 16. And 17. And 18. And then—

Jake suddenly realized that his baby was on the verge of matrimony. She had been keeping company for almost a year. The boy was a fine youngster and Jake admired him. It was practically understood that Dorothy was engaged.

Now it dawned upon him that he had to get the $2,000 he had promised for so long a time. Could he tell his daughter that he had no such sum? Could he tell her that his remarks were the words of a big bluffer?

He tried to borrow. His friends laughed at him. He went to a loan company. When they learned his salary, they offered to lend him $200 instead of $2,000.

The word spread rapidly. Old Jake was broke and needed money badly. And one night, as he walked slowly homeward from the sweatshop, another man was by his side. The other man was talking plainly.

"I know you're a right guy, Jake," said the man, "and that's why I'm giving you this chance. If you need a little dough, I can fix it for you.

"A few of the boys want to grab your firm's payroll. All you have to do is to give us the proper layout. We'll stage the thing and nobody will ever know that you had any connection with it. And your end will be 10 per cent of the haul. What do you say?"

In all his life Jake had never done a wrong thing. He shook his head doggedly and said he would have no part of such a scheme. The other man shrugged his shoulders.

The seed was planted. Jake shivered when he thought of it—but he thought of it through two sleepless nights. After all, no one would ever know. He could give his Dorothy her dowry. He could—

Three days later he met the other man again.

"I'll give you the information," said Jake nervously, "but there is one thing that stands in the way. The payroll is only $12,000 and I need more than $1,200. Will you give me $2,000 instead? I must have $2,000."

The crook nodded rapidly.

Jake's portion of the job was soon completed. He gave the boys all the details. It was agreed that the spot was to be taken on the very next pay day. And Jake was permitted to leave.

As soon as he had gone, one of the mob complained.

"Why give that old sucker two grand?" he grumbled. "He ain't doin' nothin' to earn it."

"Aw, go easy," muttered another. "If he don't get it, he'll beef on the whole bunch of us. We gotta pay him."

The leader smiled.

"We never 'got' to do anything," he observed. "Maybe I have a little plan. You just leave it to me."

On the appointed day, and at the appointed hour, the robbery took place. It went off smoothly and the $12,000 payroll was stolen in a very thorough manner. But both the police and the newspapers believed that the job was done by amateurs.

They had reason for their belief. According to them, the leader of the mob had become nervous during the holdup and had killed an old bookkeeper named Jake R——, merely because the old man had happened to look toward the drawer in which the money was kept.

* * *

A year went by and Dorothy prepared to marry the man she loved. Just before the wedding, her father's concern held a meeting. They arrived at a decision. And they sent Dorothy a note.

"In memory of your father's bravery," it read, "and as a token of our esteem for his services, we want you to accept the enclosed."

Although he never knew it, old Jake had made good. The enclosed was a check for $2,000.

Stanley Film Is Finely Acted

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Spencer Tracy goes to Sing Sing as a tough prisoner in "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," another addition to the "big house" series of films, that opened yesterday on the Stanley screen. Although he stages a riot in the uniform room as soon as he arrives, the warden tells him that he isn't so tough, and Tracy stays there just long enough to prove the warden is correct. When the fade-out comes he is destined for the hot chair—and is ready. He creates no riot then, as he did when, as a new arrival, he revolted against putting on a uniform.

While the picture, as stated, is another prison film, it is steeped in enough merit to justify classifying it far more than "just another" photoplay of its type. Based on the book of the same title by Lewis E. Lawes, warden of the prison in which most of the action is centered, it illustrates the modern "honor system" of treating convicts, and gives a general picture of prison life while detailing incidents relating only to one, Tom Connors, splendidly played by Tracy.

In fact, Tracy does so well that he goes right up among the human tough boys of the screen who have Wallace Beery and Paul Muni as their leaders. He gives a performance that never is soft, never sentimental, but always savagely and aggressively determined, to reflect the mental processes of a self-willed hard boy. But, as the warden notes, he is not so tough after all, having a human heart, and a real sense of honor.

In a life-or-death emergency he is paroled for a day, giving his word that he will return even if it means "the chair." And he keeps it, although coming back does mean just that extremity.

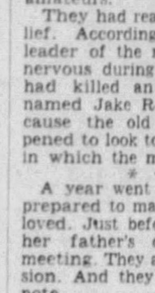
Arthur Byron characterizes the warden and makes it a stand-out amidst plenty of good acting, another fine example of which is the work of Lyle Talbot, also as a convict, one who dies in an escape attempt. Bette Davis plays the sweetheart of Tracy satisfactorily, and Louis Calhern is seen briefly but dramatically.

MUSIC — Musical Art Quartet — Carnegie Music Hall

PROGRAM.

Quartet in G Major ..... Mozart
La Oracion del Torero ..... Turina
Quartet D Major ..... Franck

The Art Society presented the Musical Art Quartet in Carnegie Music Hall last night, probably the only music of its kind which we shall hear during the current season. This ensemble, Sascha Jacobson, first violin; Paul Barnard, second violin; Louis Kaufman, viola, and Marie Roemaet-Rosanoff, 'cello, has played for us once before, and its return was most welcome.



Mr. Lissfelt

Of the program the Mozart was replete with well defined themes. Turina's enchanting prayer, so delicately touched with a few modern harmonic progressions, savoring only sparingly of local color, has a most deftly traced recitative. As it develops it becomes more and more fascinating in each of the voices, and long after hearing this work the viola is still singing its tune.

Cesar Franck's work is typical and one hears reminiscences of all his other creations. Yet the Mendelssohnian Scherzo and the skillfully developed Larghetto, a long and beautiful melody, are obvious departures from his usual idiom.

The playing of the quartet is quite distinctive. At first one wondered with the tone was tempered too far, pertinent enough surely for the Mozart, but a little wanting for the emotion of Franck. Frequently during the playing I had a feeling that the first violin was playing solo with but a background of other strings, the other players were certainly apt enough to say their parts well, and there might have been a better balance had they spoken up.

The audience seemed pleased and demanded several encores, among then an arrangement of Albeniz' Tango.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 21.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The number two President went down to Washington to confer with Huey Long and Herbert Hoover, with Hoover about firewood in the White House basement, and Long on international and national affairs.

Will Rogers

Every United States citizen is taxed $77.00 a head. That's $10 more than last year. Every wage-earner has been cut from 10 to 50 per cent, but the cost of being governed has taken a 12½ per cent raise. Then you hear birds say, "All you need to restore prosperity is confidence." Yeah? Well, you will help restore prosperity if you put taxes in proportion to the benefits you receive for them, the same as any other commodity. Did you receive $10 more protection this year than last?

Yours, WILL.

Tracy Is Star In Warner Picture

By WILLIAM PFARR

Lee Tracy, now in the Warner in "The Half-Naked Truth," is still a blustering, threatening, overwhelming Lee Tracy. It's pretty good entertainment. If it isn't up to "Blessed Event," neither is it down to "Night Mayor."

You come away from the picture remembering Tracy and Eugene Pallette for their performances. Pallette plays a stooge to Tracy. Lupe Velez is cast as a hootchy-kootchy dancer, but Miss Velez is in a tough spot. It is necessary for her to shout most of the time. And most of the time Tracy outshouts her.

And Tom Howard, who has appeared in a half-dozen Broadway revues and musical comedies, is present in a comedy short.

Just a few subjects never discussed when Presidents meet face to fist:

Who is out on the limb in branch banking?

Shall the farmer be relieved of everything? Or shall we call it a draw?

Why should the Filipinos want freedom when they are so happy making bamboo chairs for Dolly Gann?

How is it that all our debt plans get us deeper into it?

How many bankruptcies should we allow a small business man a season?

And when I'm President you must call on me some time.

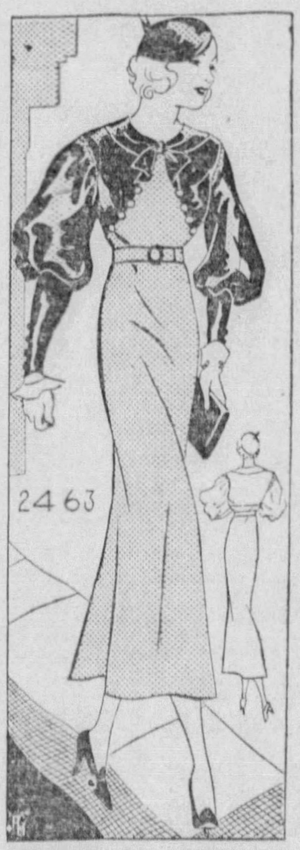
Stunning Afternoon Frock

Pattern 2463

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern



by Anne Adams

Smart women will want to include such an attractive afternoon frock as this in their spring wardrobes. The contrasting bodice topping a slim skirt, boasts clever seaming, a high neckline and voluminous puffed sleeves gathered on tight cuffs. Buttons form a perky trim. Ideal for crepe back satin or rough crinkly crepes, with contrasting color or fabric.

Pattern 2643 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires $2\frac{3}{8}$ yards 39-inch fabric and 2 yards contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included with this pattern.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

THE NEW SPRING FASHION BOOK IS READY. Containing 32 colorful pages of lovely Paris-inspired models for every spring need, this beautiful book shows how to be chic at every hour of the day. Every style is practical and easy to make. There are models for the larger figure, and pages of delightful junior and kiddie styles. SEND FOR YOUR COPY. PRICE OF CATALOG, 15 CENTS. CATALOG AND PATTERN TOGETHER, 25 CENTS. Address all mail orders to Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

1.—Enclose 15 cents in coins.
2.—Write clearly NUMBERS of patterns and SIZE wanted.
3.—Write or print your NAME and ADDRESS plainly.
4.—If you want SUN-TELEGRAPH Style Book send 10c extra.

New Cipher Should Be Easy for Enthusiasts

CIPHER NO. 46

By MALCOLM NEVINS

IDNCS URTOO HENEI TOTFS NOOOI IRRD9 PE2N8

"Bogie" on this one is 15 minutes. Every one should solve it. It's easy.

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor

Here's an easy one for you. It's Cipher No. 46 submitted by Malcolm Nevins, of New Kensington. One of our Presidents said it. Let's see if you can get the answer.

Now for Cipher No. 45. It wasn't so hard. Here's how you obtained the message.

It's a plain transposition cipher and consists of 45 letters. Break down the message by forming a rectangle 9x5, nine letters horizontally and five vertically. After doing this you found the answer was:

"How inevitably does immoderate laughter end in a sigh."

SOLUTION TO NO. 45

By MACK A. RONEY

HEBEO	TGEAO	VLSDE
HNSWI	YIELT	DIITD
MRAEI	GNAOM	AURNH

Transpose like this:

HEBEOTGEA
ITDMRAEIG
NAOMAURNH

Did you get it? Reading vertically you obtain the answer.

Write the Cipher Editor and let him know how you are getting along.

STEEL OUTPUT RATE POINTS UPWARD

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots has been at aproximately 13 per cent, 14 per cent and 16 per cent respectively in the first three weeks of the year. Although handicapped at the outset January is likely to show a better average than the 15 per cent of December.

The Washington situation has been regarded as a very adverse influence upon business and it speaks well for the seasonal influence that it has predominated to the extent of causing a slight increase in steel demand.

Increased buying of steel has been of very miscellaneous character, there being no large single c lers while no individual consuming line stands out as having increased requirements. In character the gain is much like that of last September.

While none of the wire mills has made a formal or official reduction, lower prices are going quite generally, declines from the market previously quoted being $2 a gross ton on wire rods, 15 cents a keg on nails, $2 a net ton on plain wire, $4 on galvanized wire and $6 on galvanized barb wire.

SHEET MARKET WEAK

The sheet market has grown weaker and more irregular since lower prices by $2 a ton were openly recognized as the going market more than a week ago, sellers now finding that there is no defined market.

The weakening in sheets was not regarded as having any important bearing upon the general steel price situation as for many years sheets have been an uncertain commodity, but the decline in wire is different and buyers of all steel products are watching their markets closely, having no assurance but that there may be developments almost overnight.

When steel prices decline it is due to competition or jealousies, there being no thought that the sum total of sales can be increased. Irregularities tend to delay buying, and this adverse influence is now added to that of the political situation.

Tin plate mills are running at about 45 per cent, showing a gain since the first of the year and a gain over a year ago. A substantial increase over last year's tonnage seems to be assured.

Buying of tubular goods has not increased over the low rate of December, but a fair sized tonnage of inquiry is in the market for line pipe, usually out of season at this time of year.

Fabricated structural steel lettings continue to run light. Bids have been asked for the West Bay portion of the Transbay Bridge, San Francisco to Oakland, involving 62,165 tons of structural steel, 18,700 tons of cable and about 4,000 tons of steel and castings. The whole project will require more than 175,000 tons.

AUTO RISE SLIGHT

Production of automobiles has not continued its increase and the January total is expected to run only slightly above that of December.

Farm implement makers have begun buying steel, though in a small way.

Freight carloadings have been making an increasingly favorable showing, but railroads are not yet moved to begin car and locomotive repairs. Several inquiries for rails are expected within the next few weeks.

Purely seasonal increase in steel demand, during the current quarter, is expected to be mild, resembling that of a year ago rather than the very large increases seen in the early months of 1931 and 1930. For very substantial increase an improvement in general business is awaited, with hopes that this will develop in March or April.

BUILDING TOPS LAST YEAR

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Contracts awarded for new construction in states east of the Rockies between January 1 and January 15 totaled $43,261,300, says F. W. Dodge Corporation. This compares with $37,312,000 in the corresponding period last year. December's contract total was $81,-219,300, against $105,302,300 for November and $136,851,600 for December, 1931. Total volume for 1932, covering all classes of construction, was $1,351,158,700, compared with $3,092,849,500 in 1931.

Kentucky Home Life Receivership Lifted

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The temporary receivership of the Kentucky Home Life Insurance was dissolved last night by order of Franklin County Circuit Court, and the court order restraining it from doing business was set aside without prejudice.

The order was issued by Circuit Judge H. Church Ford after attorneys for the state insurance department and the company had reached an agreement on differences which led to appointing of the temporary receivers.

Toledo Factories Expand Payrolls

TOLEDO, Jan. 21.—More than 3,000 workers have been recalled since January 1 by the 51 major factories that make weekly reports and the 15,726 now on their payrolls is the largest number in more than two years. Last week the plants added 1,606 workers. In the preceding week they recalled 1,321. The next report, which will be made Monday for this week, is likely to reveal a still further gain of more than 2,000.

Northwestern Asks Loan of $11,127,700

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve a three year loan of $11,127,700 from the Reconstruction Corporation.

The money would be used to pay interest, equipment trust certificates and debenture maturities. The security would be 5 per cent first mortgage bonds.

STOCKS AGAIN MOVE QUIETLY HIGHER

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The stock market moved moderately higher in quiet early trading today.

Allied Chemical and Liggett and Myers B gained a point or more, Harvester, Case, Continental Can and New York Central advanced nearly as much. Smaller gains were made by Air Reduction, United States Steel, American Telephone, du Pont and Woolworth. The rails opened steadily and then edged forward fractionally as trading progressed.

The favorable reaction reported in England and France to the Hoover-Roosevelt move in prying the lid off war debt discussion was well received in financial quarters, although enthusiasm was tempered with the thought that considerable time must elapse before anything like a full settlement could be reached.

Departure of A. H. Wiggin and P. Abbot Goodhue for Berlin was accompanied by reports that American banking creditors of German institutions had tentatively agreed in preliminary meetings to modify their earlier insistence upon a 10 per cent principal payment by Germany in the standstill contract. Recent advices have said that German business has begun to experience an encouraging recovery. Bank creditors indicated that they did not want to impose terms so harsh that they might kill any budding prospects of revival.

Domestic trade reports showed little change. Business has apparently gained in at least seasonal proportions and some hope is entertained that by next spring a stronger forward movement may be in evidence.

Sterling rallied 3-16 cent further at the opening to $3.35 13-16 for cables. French francs were up 1-16 point to 3.90¼ cents.

R.K.O. PROGRAM UNDER FIRE

BALTIMORE, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Proceedings to prevent the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation from placing in operation a capital refinancing plan have been started by Edward J. Hicky, a stockholder.

A suit, filed yesterday in circuit court, asked the prospective plan be declared illegal and void and all reclassified stock issued under it be recalled and cancelled. As no order was signed in connection with the suit, the defendant company has until February 28 to answer the allegations.

Hickey charged the new financing plan was designated to give the Radio Corporation of America control of the defendant organization in return for advancing funds to $2,000,000 and further possible advances up to $11,600,000.

Cuba and Chile Form Trade Pact

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—A modus vivendi between Cuba and Chile whereby 10,000 tons of Cuban sugar will enter the South American country free of duty in exchange for tariff concessions of 50 per cent on certain Chilean products was announced by the department of state.

The agreement, which expires May 31, opens the way to a formal commercial treaty between the two nations, Secretary of State Ferrara said.

Patricia Pitt

A record of 319 alumnae attended the Federation of Girls' School Societies luncheon and election yesterday in the Twentieth Century Club. The luncheon was a buffet, and later Judge Sara Soffel gave a talk on "The Challenge of the Present," followed by election of officers. And before I tell you all about the smart frocks I saw, I'll tell you about the election.

Mrs. George Singer Ebbert, of Farmington, was again chosen president of the federation, and, by the way, she looked charming in black velvet with steel beading at the neckline, and a corsage of orchids; first vice president, Ellen McClay, Spence; second vice president, Mrs. Philip Rodgers, Mt. Vernon; third, Suzanne Anderson, Thurston; fourth, Marian Gaylord, Miss Ellis; corresponding secretary, Priscilla Burnett, Birmingham; recording secretary, Mrs. Paul B. Arnst, Winchester; treasurer, Mrs. Theodore F. Smith, Miss Saywood's; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Henry Rowland, Chevy Chase; chairman of the house committee, Mrs. James I. Marsh, Dobbs; assistant chairman, Mrs. D. N. Carlin, National Park Seminary; chairman of occupational therapy, Mrs. George Kahl, Miss Mason's, and vice chairman of occupational therapy, Mrs. C. B. Steffy, Miss Mason's.

Named Slate

And on the nominating committee were Mrs. J. H. Holmes, Dobbs Ferry, chairman; Mrs. James Graves, Ogontz; Mrs. Glenn McKee Bennett; Mrs. Charles Johnston, Briarcliffe; Mrs. W. Y. Cocken, Jr., Fairmont; Caroline Mitchell, Rosemary; Mrs. Francis Sellers Guthrie, Springside, and Mrs. A. N. Otterbein, Finch.

Seated at the Briarcliffe table were Neil Stuart Zang, in hunter's green wool lace; Sally Wiggin, in red crepe; Mrs. Wilson Ray, in black and green crepe; Mrs. Frederick Crawford, in blue and white; Mrs. C. B. Monro and Mrs. C. H. Johnston, Jr.

Attractive Patricia Witherow, seated with the Rosemary group, wore gold jersey, tucked around the neckline, which was finished with a high white collar. Clara Dorothea Jenkins, I saw, too, in an attractive ensemble of brown and chartreuse green; Mrs. William A. Duckham, of Ogontz, in a cherry red suit with a grey squirrel tippet and matching muff, and a touch of the fur on her smart red felt turban. The debs of this year were well represented, too. I saw Bertha Brooks in red wool, with Althea Robinson, in brown, and Collie Jennings, in an unusual frock having the blouse of grey, ribbed silk, a scarlet girdle, and darker grey skirt. Mrs. Wallace Hurtte Rowe, Jr., chose rust wool for her costume.

Seen at Luncheon

At the Bishop Bowman table were Mrs. Herbert DuPuy in black crepe, and Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., in black, and I noticed at another table Mrs. Frank W. Edmondson, in black crepe having a cowl arrangement of white pebbled crepe, the sleeves terminating in a puff embroidered with white angora. With her was Mrs. Frank J. Kier, in beige crepe, and I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Frederick Ickes Merrick, in navy blue crepe, with an open-work motif at the neck and sleeves.

Good-looking Betty Shaw wore green wool, having a pleated cape collar, so brief it was almost a frill, and Mrs. Jack Lewis sitting with her, wore brown crepe with a green and white satin bow smartly finishing the neckline. And I saw Mrs. John W. Lawrence, in red wool; Mrs. Reginald Quaile, Helen Leovy, in rust wool with a black caracul coat; Priscilla and Gertrude Dally, Priscilla Barnes, Helen Rauh, in green crepe with green velvet trimming; Louise and Nancy [illegible]ott, Mary Lee Rust, in gray twill, with seal collars and cuffs; her sister, Alice, in a Spanish tile wool suit; attractive Annette Chester and Mary Lou Paull, and ever so many others.

Girls to Usher

Virginia Frew Wright, acting president of the University Medical Center Aide Society, announces that 10 girls belonging to the society will be ushers for the three days of the Kroger Food Foundation cooking school at Memorial Hall on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Each girl will receive a basket of food for her services, which will be given to the poor at the Falk clinic. Mrs. W. McCook is treasurer and Louise Reed secretary.

Pittsburghers Stop At New York Hotel

Among the recent arrivals at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, from Pittsburgh, are Mr. and Mrs. W. Remmel, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Smith, Miss Ruth Nethken, Miss Helen Nethken, H. W. CALVIN COOLIDGE'S LIFE STORY

Coolidge Given Place In Law Office After Ending College Days

CHAPTER VII.

We looked upon Garman as a man who walked with God. His course was a demonstration of the existence of a personal God, of our power to know Him, of the Divine immanence, and of the complete dependence of all the universe on Him as the Creator and Father "in whom we live and move and have our being." Every reaction in the universe is a manifestation of His presence. Man was revealed as His son, and nature as the hem of His Garment, while through a common fatherhood we are all embraced in a common brotherhood. The spiritual appeal of music, sculpture, painting and all other art lies in the revelation it affords of the Divine beauty.

The conclusions which followed from this position were logical and inescapable. It sets man off in a separate kingdom from all the other creatures in the universe, and makes him a true son of God and a partaker of the Divine nature. This is the warrant for his freedom and the demonstration of his equality. It does not assume all are equal in degree but all are equal in kind. On that precept rests a foundaton for democracy that cannot be shaken. It justifies faith in the people.

No doubt there are those who think they can demonstrate that this teaching was not correct. With them I have no argument. I know that in experience it has worked. In time of crisis my belief that people can know the truth, that when it is presented to them they must accept it, has saved me from many of the counsels of expediency. The spiritual nature of men has a power of its own that is manifest in every great emergency from Runnymede to Marston Moor, from the Declaration of Independence to the abolition of slavery.

Necessity of Work

In ethics he taught us that there is a standard of righteousness, that might does not make right, that the end does not justify the means and that expediency as a working principle is bound to fail. The only hope of perfecting human relationship is in accordance with the law of service under which men are not so solicitous about what they shall get as they are about what they shall give. Yet people are entitled to the rewards of their industry. What they earn is theirs, no matter how small or how great. But the possession of property carries the obligation to use it in a larger service. For a man not to recognize the truth, not to be obedient to law, not to render allegiance to the state, is for him to be at war with his own nature, to commit suicide. That is why "the wages of sin is death." Unless we live rationally we perish, physically, mentally, spiritually.

A great deal of emphasis was placed on the necessity and dignity of work. Our talents are given us in order that we may serve ourselves and our fellow men. Work is the expression of intelligent action for a splendid end. It is not industry, but idleness, that is degrading. All kinds of work from the most menial service to the most exalted station are alike honorable. One of the earliest mandates laid on the human race was to subdue the earth. That meant work.

Follower of Truth

If he was not in accord with some of the current teachings about religion, he gave to his class a foundation for the firmest religious convictions. He presented no mysteries or dogmas and never asked us to take a theory on faith, but supported every position by facts and logic. He believed in the Bible and constantly quoted it to illustrate his position. He divested religion and science of any conflict with each other, and showed that each rested on the common basis of our ability to know the truth.

To Garman was given a power which took his class up into a high mountain of spiritual life and left them alone with God.

In him was no pride of opinion, no atom of selfishness. He was a follower of the truth, a disciple of the Cross, who bore the infirmities of us all. Those who finished his course in the last term of senior year found in their graduating exercises a real commencement, when they would begin their efforts to serve their fellow men in the practical affairs of life. Of course it was not possible for us to accept immediately the results of his teachings or live altogether in accordance with them. I do not think he expected it. He was constantly reminding us that the spirit was willing but the flesh was strong, but that nevertheless, if we would continue steadfastly to think on these things we would be changed from glory to glory through increasing intellectual and moral power. He was right.

Impressed by Faculty

To many my report of his course will seem incomplete and crude. I am not writing a treatise but trying to tell what I secured from his teaching, and relating what has seemed important in it to me, from the memory I have retained of it, since I began it 35 years ago. He expected it to be supplemented. He was fond of referring to it as a mansion not made with hands, incomplete but sufficient for our spiritual habitation. What he revealed to us of the nature of God and man will stand. Against it "the gates of hell shall not prevail."

As I look back upon the college I am more and more impressed with the strength of its faculty, with their power for good. Perhaps it has men now with a broader preliminary training though they then were profound scholars, perhaps it has men of keener intellects, though they then were very exact in their reasoning, but the great distinguishing mark of all of them was that they were men of character. Their words carried conviction because we were compelled to believe in the men who uttered them. They had the power not merely to advise but literally to instruct their students.

Enters Law Firm

In accordance with custom our class chose three of its members by popular vote to speak at the commencement. To me was assigned the grove oration, which according to immemorial practice deals with the record of the class in a witty and humorous way. While my effort was not without some success, I very soon learned that making fun of people in a public way was not a good method to secure friends, or likely to lead to much advancement, and I have scrupulously avoided it.

In the latter part of my course my scholarship had improved, so that I was graduated cum laude.

After my course was done I went home to do a summer's work on the farm, which was to be my last. I had decided to enter the law and expected to attend a law school, but one of my classmates wrote me late in the summer that there was an opportunity to go into the office of Hammond and Field at Northampton, so I applied to them and was accepted. After I had been there a few days a most courteous letter came from the Hon. William P. Dillingham requesting me to call on him at Montpelier and indicating he would take me into his office. He recalled the circumstance when I found him in the Senate after I became Vice President. But I had already reverted to Massachusetts, where my family had lived for 150 years before their advent into Vermont. Had his letter reached me sooner probably it would have changed the whole course of my life.

Eminent Attorneys

Northampton was the county seat and a quiet but substantial town, with pleasant surroundings and fine old traditions reaching back beyond Jonathan Edwards. It was just recovering from the depression of 1893, preparing to eliminate its grade crossings and starting some new industries that would add to the business it secured from Smith College, which was a growing institution with many hundreds of students.

The senior member of the law firm was John C. Hammond, who was considered the leader of the Hampshire Bar. He was a lawyer of great learning and wide business experience, with a remarkable ability in the preparation of pleadings and an insight that soon brought him to the crucial point of a case. He was massive and strong rather than elegant, and placed great stress on accuracy. He presented a cause in court with ability and skill. The junior member was Henry P. Field, an able lawyer and a man of engaging personality and polish, who I found was an alderman. That appeared to me at the time to be close to the Almighty in importance. I shall always remember with a great deal of gratitude the kindness of these two men to me.

That I was now engaged in the serious enterprise of life I so fully realized that I went to the barber shop and divested myself of the college fashion of long hair. Office hours were from 8 to about 6 o'clock, during which I spent my time in reading Kent's Commentaries and in helping prepare writs, deeds, wills and other documents. My evenings I gave to some of the masters of English composition. I read the speeches of Lord Erskine, of Webster, and Choate. The essays of Macaulay interested me much, and the writings of Carlyle and John Fiske I found very stimulating. Some of the orations of Cicero I translated, being especially attached to the defense of his friend the poet Archias, because in it he dwelt on the value and consolation of good literature. I read much in Milton and Shakespeare and found delight in the shorter poems of Kipling, Field and Riley.

Pleasant News

My first Christmas was made more merry by getting notice that the Sons of the American Revolution had awarded me the prize of a gold medal worth about $150 for writing the best essay on "The Principles Fought for in the American Revolution," in a competition open to the seniors of all the colleges of the nation. The notice came one day, and it was announced in the next morning papers, where Judge Field saw it before I had a chance to tell him. So when he came to the office he asked me about it. I had not had time to send the news home. And then I had a little vanity in wishing my father to learn of it first from the press, which he did. He had questioned some whether I was really making anything of my education, in pretense I now think, not because he doubted it but because he wished to impress me with the desirability of demonstrating it.

But my main effort in those days was to learn the law. The Superior Court had three civil and two criminal terms each year in Northampton. Whenever it was sitting I spent all my time in the court room. In this way I became familiar with the practical side of trial work. I soon came to see that the counsel who knew the law were the ones who held the attention of the judge, took the jury with them, and won their cases. They were prepared. The office where I was had a very large general practice which covered every field and took them into all the courts of the commonwealth but little into the Federal courts. I assisted in the preparation of cases and went to court with the members of the firm to watch all their trial work and help keep a record of testimony for use in the arguments. It was all a work of absorbing interest to me.

North Hills Debaters To Clash on Thursday

On Thursday afternoon, in the Glenshaw Community Church, the North Hills Woman's Club will hear a debate presented by Mrs. William W. Ray, Mrs. L. L. Finch, Mrs. Harry Freed and Mrs. A. A. Thompson, Jr., on "Resolved: That Social Problems Are Greater Today Than in the Past."

A reading group has been organized with Mrs. Ray as chairman, and meets the third Monday afternoon of each month. A class in contract bridge is to be conducted by Ellis O. Keller, the proceeds to be given to the welfare chairman, Mrs. Charles F. Owrey, whose committee has been active in distributing clothing to school children.

New Music Club Ensemble to Make Bow

The piano and vocal ensemble division of the Tuesday Musical Club will make its debut Tuesday, January 31, in Memorial Hall, under the chairmanship of Mrs. T. C. Donovan and her committee, comprising Anna Laura Cree, Jessie Yuille Yon and Virginia Byerly. This new section is the outgrowth of suggestions for more ensemble work made at the state convention of music clubs in Philadelphia last spring.

The first number on the program will be played on three pianos by Mrs. Paul Jenkins, Madelaine Emich, Grace McMillan, Mrs. Charles H. Henninger, Georgia Orwig and Elizabeth Storer. A vocal trio composed of Elsie Breese Mitchell and Florence Sampson Boggs, sopranos, and Alta Schultz, contralto, with Beulah Taylor Marsten at the piano, will sing a group of songs, including "The Snow" by Edward Elgar, for which the violin obligato will be played by Rose Aiello.

Next will be featured a group of eight singers, with the following personnel: Esther Edmundson Mohr, Mary Dickinson, Lucille Miller Werner and Ruth Parker, sopranos; Ida Mae Claudy, Mabel King, Carolyn Mahaffey and Carrie Mina Meyer, contraltos.

A Bach Concert for three pianos will be played by Mrs. Charles H. Henninger, Georgia Orwig and Elizabeth Storer. Margaret Garrity, soprano, and Rose Leader Chislett, contralto, will sing a duet. Eleanor Herring, violinist, will play obligatos, and Marian Deuel McDade and Marie Caveney Coolahan will be accompanists.

The program is to close with the entire group presenting "Seraphic Song" by Rubinstein. The usual tea in charge of Henrietta Hibbard and Mrs. G. Frank Slocum will supplement the program.

A cabaret dance will be held at the Plaza Cafe by the Palsaide Club on February 15 to celebrate the club's third anniversary. Miss Gladys Weinberg and Miss Hilda Greenberg are hostesses.

Sims Holds Root Of War to Be Economic

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The root of war is purely economic; the basis of all war lies with Chambers of Commerce and other commercial institutions, Admiral William Sowden (not Snowden, if you please) Sims, retired, told the Friday Morning Club yesterday in Carnegie Music Hall. An overdeveloped spirit of nationalism has already reduced world trade 60 per cent and there will be no end to it until people say to each other "Oh, hell! This thing is strangling the world, let's get together and do something about it," this vigorous young-old speaker stated.

There must always be surface ships; no airplanes can ever take the place of a navy, Admiral Sims declared, and he scoffed at the idea that there can ever be a naval war between Japan and the United States. As he picturesquely put it, if a fleet has 6,000 miles to travel and can only go 3,000 without refueling and has no refueling station at the half-way point, all it can do is to put the ball of its thumb to its nose, make a derisive gesture and go back home.

Concerning propaganda during a war, Admiral Sims said, it is dirty, disgusting and unsportsmanlike, but powerful and probably will always be used. He believes it is quite necessary that citizens should have some understanding of the fundamentals of strategy, that it would be nothing more than common sense, for when people consent to declaration of war they place their whole safety in the officials directing that war.

Admiral Sims was entertained at luncheon in the Twentieth Century Club, Mrs. J. O. Miller acting as hostess.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Meine's Signing Helpful.
Hornsby Says He Quit.
First Holdout in 1870.
Pirate Days of Cross.
Oxygen Faith Aids Japs.
Making Gridders Equal.

EARLY START BY VET GAIN FOR STAFF

WHAT HAD THREATENED to be one of the toughest jobs in connection with the roundup of the Pirates for 1933 was completed by President Benswanger in his usual smooth style when he signed Pitcher Heinie Meine. The quick enrollment of the veteran right-hander is further evidence that the Pittsburgh club is following a policy of fair-dealing, for Meine usually has ways of his own. In four years with the Bucs, Heinie has worked only one full season. He was a holdout in 1929 and did not start a game until June 16. In 1930 he quit the club and went home in August. Last year he was again a holdout, and did not make his first start until June 4.

Heinie Meine

It will be a big gain for the pitching staff to have Meine on the training trip and ready for regular work when the season opens. The loss of his services for almost the first eight weeks of the 1932 race was one of the factors that cost the Pirates the pennant, as in that time he might have won more than the four games by which they lost out, to say nothing of the harmful effects of the extra work which his absence put on the other pitchers.

IT TOOK HIM five months to recall the details of his sudden departure from the Cubs, but Rogers Hornsby now would have you understand that he was not fired. He says he demanded his release.

After covering third base in a certain game when the team was crippled, Hornsby, it is asserted, was ordered by President Veeck not to attempt to play again. Rogers says he told Veeck to mind his own business, and quit his job then and there when the club head demurred. Hornsby does not explain how it came about that the club paid his salary up to the end of the season. It is hardly the fashion to give extra pay to employes who quit of their own accord.

THE FIRST HOLDOUT in baseball has been traced back to 1870, when Charley Sweasy, second baseman of the original Cincinnati Red Stockings, demanded that his $800 salary of 1869 be boosted to $1,000. Charley lost the argument, but he started something that's still going.

The top salary on that old Red Stocking club was $1,400, drawn by Shortstop George Wright. His brother, Harry, who was manager as well as center fielder, received $1,200. The payroll of the entire club totaled $9,500, less than 40 per cent of Babe Ruth's cut in 1933.

IN A ROUND-UP of old ball players they found a Pirate of yesteryear working as a clothing salesman in a Philadelphia department store. He is Monte Cross, now 62, with a wife, son and daughter and a 17-year-old grandson. After Connie Mack succeeded Al Buckenger as manager of the Pirates in September of 1894, one of the first moves made by the new pilot was to bring Cross here from Syracuse to plug a hole at shortstop, where Frank Scheibeck, Eugene Demontreville, Fred Steere and even two catchers had been tried following the release of Jack Glasscock in August. The remainder of the infield at the time was made up of Jake Beckley, Louie Bierbauer and Fred Hartman, the last named being still a resident of McKeesport today. Cross was retained during 1895, but was out of the game much of the time, and before the 1896 race Mack traded him to St. Louis, with Pitcher Billy Hart, for Fred Ely, one of the greatest fielding and throwing shortstops of all time.

Joe McCarthy

IF MINOR LEAGUE records could be taken as assurance of major league success, Joe McCarthy would have nothing to fear about his pitching staff for this year, and rivals would have to give up all hope of a let-down in the Yankee slab department.

For McCarthy has five hurlers coming up who won the remarkable total of 102 games in the minors last season. Don Brennan won 26 for Newark; Russ Van Atta, 23 for St. Paul; Marvin Duke, 23 for Erie; Jimmy DeShong, 19 for Sacramento, and Pete Jablonowski, 11 for Newark.

THAT SPELLS AN average of better than 20 victories per man. On the "Lost" side of the book, the defeats charged against the quintet totaled only 34. The complete record shows that the five flingers won three out of every four games pitched during the year.

If the figures could be trusted, Yankee supporters might see almost a whole new staff of regulars in the five mound additions to be taken on the training trip. But it is one thing to win for Newark, and Erie, and another thing to fool major league hitters.

THOUGH SCOFFING AT Matt Mann's charges about the doping of Japanese swimmers in the Olympic Games as being tardy and far-fetched, coast experts admit that the inhalation of oxygen helped in a psychological way in the winning of five out of six races. It is recalled that the Japs had a training system figured out, with the oxygen business a part of it, that was calculated to pep up their natators both physically and mentally. The system was worked out on a calendar, so that on a certain day they ate certain things and swam a certain distance. Next day they ate something else and swam according to a slightly different schedule.

AND SO ON, with the schedule carefully timed to bring the swimmer to an absolute physical and mental peak on the day of competition. From 14-year-old Kitamura, who won the 1,500 meters in record time, right up to the head coach and manager, the sons of Nippon believed implicity in their system.

They felt that the slightest deviation from it would make the difference between victory and defeat. As part of the system they believed that oxygen gave them strength and endurance. And whether it did or not makes no difference—they believed it did, and that often amounts to the same thing.

THE BENEFIT FOOTBALL game in San Francisco tomorrow, in which the Green Bay Packers, with Red Grange added, will meet a team picked by Ernie Nevers, the event being sponsored by the Knights of Columbus, will not be the closing number of the drawn-out gridiron season after all.

Bill Corbus

For the Packers have been booked to play one additional game on the Coast before lowering the curtain. They will appear in Los Angeles one week from tomorrow against an eleven selected by Ernie Pinckert and made up largely of former University of Southern California players.

BILL CORBUS, Stanford's all-America guard, who put on a great one-man show at the Stadium here last fall and was pronounced by the Panthers the best guard they had faced all year, offers a suggestion which he thinks would serve as an effective means of killing the proselyting practice in college football. His idea is to give to all players who are good enough to make the varsity squad at any college, free tuition, free room and free board. It is now done at many schools, either openly or in a round-about way, but Corbus says that if all colleges, large and small, are placed on the same level, the high school star will not have to shop around, but will pick the institution which he really likes best. Bill ventures no guesses as to how long it would be before somebody offered a little extra.

RANKIN BEATS W. P. I. A. L. CHAMPIONS

By JULIUS LEVIN

If they can maintain the pace they've set to date, it looks very much as though the Perry and South High quintets will do the battling in the playoff series for the City League basketball title this year.

South and Perry assumed undisputed leaderships in their respective sections yesterday. South turned aside the stubborn Schenley team, 37 to 24, with Jesko leading in the point-getting with seven field goals and three fouls. Perry won its fifth game in a row by beating Allegheny, 26 to 16. The two defeated fives were relegated to second place in the standings.

Kornick, leading scorer of the league, was good for 14 points against Allegheny as he zipped through seven field goals, equaling the efforts of Jesko for South.

PEABODY LOSES

In other Section I contests, Taylor Allderdice defeated Peabody, 25 to 20, and Westinghouse upset Fifth Avenue, 27 to 21.

Over in Section II, Langley walloped Carrick, 34 to 11, and Allegheny Vocational defeated Oliver with a surprising show of strength, 26 to 10.

Jock Rosenberg's Rankin High team continued its march to the title in Section VIII of the W. P. I. A. L. by beating the Braddock five, defending league champion, 34 to 30. In the same section, Edgewood scored somewhat of an upset by beating Ed Paulie's Swissvale team, 22 to 21.

Oakmont furnished New Kensington a severe test in Section I, losing by a 31-to-30 score after a hot battle. Rochester scored an upset by taking New Brighton, 19 to 14; Ambridge continued its fine play by whipping Monaca, 37 to 19, and Aliquippa, one of the leading championship threats, crushed Freedom, 33 to 8.

FORD CITY WINS

Ford City kept its undefeated record intact in Section VI, defeating Leechburg, 31 to 21. Homestead walloped Munhall, 31 to 15, in Section VII in the only contest in the division.

In other games, Crafton staged a comeback to beat McKees Rocks, 26 to 9; Stowe defeated Dormont, 21 to 20; Dunbar downed Hurst, 29 to 21; Pitcairn broke into the victory column for the first time, defeating Glassport, 21 to 14; McDonald took the lead in Section XIV, winning over Cecil, 24 to 19; Brownsville beat South Union, 32 to 15, and Robinson made it eight in a row by trimming South Fayette, 22 to 17.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: AUCTIONING A TOWN—John Bishop, who for 20 years owned the small village of Eliza, Ill., placed the entire city on the auction block on November 14, 1929, and sold it to five bidders, receiving a total of $8,502.50 in cash. Bishop said he had worked 16 hours a day for 20 years as Eliza's chief citizen and owner, that he finally had decided to take a rest and that the auction was the result. The village includes a general store, drug store, barber shop, pool parlor, community building and several residences. MUCH ADO ABOUT "SIMPLE"—The Oxford English Dictionary requires more than seven columns of 1,200 words each, or in excess of 8,000 words, to define the adjective "simple." BOZEMAN LEADS IN CUE PLAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—J. N. Bozeman, Jr., of Vallejo, Cal., today held the lead in the world three-cushion billiards championship tournament, but Clarence Jackson, of Detroit, had a chance of pulling up even.

Following the opening match of the day between Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, and Frank Scoville, of Buffalo, N. Y., Jackson, victorious in his two starts, was matched with Allen Hall, of Chicago. Another victory for the veteran from Detroit would put him in a tie with Bozeman, who last night defeated Hall for his third in a row. In the night match, Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., and Arthur Thurnblad, of Chicago, will meet.

In the afternoon tests, Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, and Augie Kieckhefer, of Chicago, the defending champion, pulled up in the race. Denton had surprisingly little trouble in defeating Layton, 50 to 39, in 56 innings.

Kieckhefer was forced to make a sensational finish to defeat Scoville, 50 to 49, in 55 innings. The Buffalo shotmaker led, 20 to 9, in the fifteenth inning, but Kieckhefer got started and pulled up even and tied it at 25-all in the twenty-fifth. The score was tied eight times before the Chicago southpaw went out. His high run was 5, while Scoville had a 6.

PIRATES SIGN WAITE HOYT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Waite Hoyt, former star right-hander of the New York Yankees, and last season with the New York Giants, has been signed to a one-year contract by the Pittsburgh Pirates, it was announced this morning by William E. Benswanger, president of the local club.

Hoyt was declared a free agent by the Giants after the close of the 1932 season and he immediately started negotiations for a position with the Pirates.

The signing of Hoyt gives the Pirates a veteran righthander who should bolster the young pitching staff the Bucs will carry into the 1933 pennant race.

He will leave with the first squad for the training camp at Paso Robles, Cal.

The rapidly-growing list of Pittsburgh Pirate signatories showed another prominent name today, and there was an intimation from the home office that at least one more would be added in the course of a few days.

Pitcher Heinie Meine, the big holdout star of one year ago, drove to Pittsburgh yesterday from his St. Louis home. Heinie hustled out to the Pirate office in Oakland and after a conference with Messers Benswanger and Watters he affixed his name to a club document. The contract, as per custom, was a one-year paper.

President William Benswanger would not discuss the terms of Meine's contract. It had been whispered that the high-salaried performer would be asked to take a cut, but the club officials did not care to go into this phase of the transaction.

Meine forced the Buccos to pay him a fancy figure last year, it is believed. He was one of the ranking pitchers of the game in 1931. The 1932 season was under way before he was brought into the fold.

GIANTS SIGN CRITZ

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Continuing to manifest no difficulty in signing their players to 1933 contracts, the New York Giants have added Hughey Critz, of Greenwood, Miss., veteran second baseman, to the autograph fold. Critz is the third regular to sign this week.

By JESS CARVER

On its record, this does not appear to be a very good Notre Dame basketball team which challenges Pitt's floor claims in the Stadium Pavilion tonight, but its a Notre Dame team, which is enough to assure all and sundry that regardless of the outcome, tonight's struggle will be no pink tea.

The Panthers and Irish renew their six-year-old floor relationship tonight, playing the tenth game of the series with the Panthers holding a 5-to-4 edge over the South Benders. The Irish come here this year with a very much so-so record, having won four games out of nine played (a record identical with the Ramblers' mark against Pitt) and have been taken into camp by three teams which met defeat at the claws of the Panthers, to wit, Minnesota, Butler and Purdue. Creighton and Northwestern are the other teams which have taken the Ramblers over the jumps this season.

Moose Krause

PITT THE FAVORITE

Pitt probably would have entered tonight's tussle the favorite anyway, but the return to action of Claire Cribbs sophomore center, has boosted the stock of the locals to the extent that they are expected to give the Notre Dames a trimming. Not that the Irish will be push-overs, for they have three sterling performers on hand in big Moose Krause, the giant footballer, Leo (Another) Crowe and Johnny Baldwin. There has been a Crowe at Notre Dame since eggs were cheap, or cheaper than they are now; we are not exactly up on our marketing. Leo is the last, however, and in this case, the last is far from least.

Krause is the lad who put the Pitts on the spot in both games last year and was directly responsible for the Notre Dame victories. He's up against a better center than he faced in Johnny Brown a year back in this Chas. Cribbs, and may look forward to a busy evening.

The lineup that Coach Carlson counted on to carry the Pitt colors early in the season, but which was disrupted when Cribbs was injured, will start tonight. Claire will be back at center, with Skippy Hughes and Capt. Don Smith at the forwards and Russ Ochsenhirt, who has been filling in at center during Cribbs' absence, and Don McCamant at the guards.

IRISH LINEUP IN DOUBT

Notre Dame's starting lineup remains in doubt, but indications are that Alberts or McGuff and Voegele will go at the forwards, Krause at center and Crowe and Capt. Baldwin at the guards.

Following is a complete record of the Pitt-Notre Dame series to date, with the scores and all neatly and (we hope) correctly set forth:

In a preliminary, which will get under way at 7:15 o'clock, the Panther Cubs will play Kiski. The varsity game is scheduled for 8:15.

BOXERS FACE TEMPLE

With Harry Conti serving as captain in the place of Cowboy Seigal, Pitt's varsity boxers pry off the lid of their 1933 campaign tonight in Philadelphia, engaging Temple University's Owl punchers in an Intercollegiate Coference match.

While the boxers are in Philly and the basketballers are in action in the Stadium Pavilion, Coach Pat Corr's Panther swimmers meet the Rider College, of Trenton, N. J., splashers in a dual meet in the Trees Gym pool.

CURRY TO PLAY SHAMROCKS

By TOM BIRKS

The Central District Soccer League all-stars are booked to oppose an Allegheny Valley League all-star setup this afternoon at Westinghouse High School field. The game will be called at 3 p. m. and is the only contest of the day, but will serve to whet the appetites of the district fans for the big fray tomorrow as Curry and the Cleveland Shamrocks clash at Greenlee Field in the first round of the National open challenge cup competition. This will be the first time that a first round game in the open tourney has been scheduled in Pittsburgh.

The West Penn cup committees met last night and made the draw for the open, junior and charity competitions. The entry was rather disappointing. The draw follows:

OPEN COMPETITION

JUNIOR COMPETITION

February 12—Sturgeon at McKnights.

February 19—McKnights or Sturgeon at Moon Run.

In the first round of the charity cup play, McKnights will play at Curry, Coverdale at Sturgeon, Moon Run at Lawrenceville-Springdale at Coraopolis, Rosies at Shannon Zonies and Sygan at Shannon Webers.

Joe Doktor Loses To Buddy McArthur

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Buddy McArthur, 183, Fairmont, outpointed Joe Doktor, 188, Buffalo, N. Y., in the main go of 10 rounds on a fight card here last night.

TUNNEY WRITES MORE ABOUT 'LONG COUNT' BATTLE

HUE AND CRY RIDICULED BY CHAMPION

SYNOPSIS

At this chapter opens, Tunney's on the floor (in a narrative sense) taking that much mooted "long count" during the seventh round of his return fight with Dempsey at Chicago on September 22, 1927. The reluctant Jack finally has been shooed to "the farthest neutral corner" while Referee Dave Barry has suspended the count, in accordance with the rule, for a disputed number of seconds. Gene is planning what to do when he gets up while waiting for the referee's shout of "Nine!" Tunney remembers Dempsey's illegal "rabbit punch" . . .

CHAPTER FORTY

I decided that I must avoid allowing Dempsey to close in on me when I got up. I remembered that, in the early part of the fight, as I feinted him and moved away, he would flounder after me. This was the cue to my safest course: To get up and make him chase me. This was my decision.

Gene Tunney

To the average person the possibility of all this thinking, weighing, rejecting and deciding seems incredible in so short a space of time. Considering that thought in the normal person is instantaneous, I can readily understand the development of a faculty for emergency thinking.

Resilience, precision and decisiveness were needed. My years of training had provided them. Determined to get the last part of a second that was mine, I rose as the referee raised his hand to say—TEN!

DISCUSSES 'LONG COUNT'

There has been considerable question about the length of time I was on the floor. Many newspapermen at the ringside said that the referee lost two seconds in taking Dempsey from behind me and putting him into a neutral corner. Leo Flynn, Dempsey's chief second, said that the stop-watch in his corner registered 14 seconds, from the time I went down until I got up. It was agreed by all the experts to accept Flynn's timing. Even photographs were taken of this magic watch, the next day, registering 14 seconds. Wonderful provision and thoughtfulness there, dear Percival! I have never found out what the official timekeeper's watch registered. It did not matter.

Realizing, as do all professional boxers, that the first nine seconds of a knockdown belong to the man who is on the floor, I never had any thought of getting up before the referee said "Nine!" Only badly dazed boxers who have momentarily lost consciousness and "showoffs" fail to take the nine seconds that are theirs. No boxer that I have known has carried a stopwatch on his wrist going into the ring. Boxers always go by the referee's timing. Whether 29 seconds or nine seconds had elapsed when the referee said "NINE!" would have made no difference to me. My signal to get off the floor was the count—nine! The action of the referee in not taking up the count immediately when I went on the floor, regardless of where Dempsey was, is another question.

RULES GOVERN SPORTS

Now, the promoters and enthusiasts of boxing say it is one of the noblest of the sports. I will not gainsay that. Occasionally this is my belief. All sports are governed by certain rules. When games cease to have rules, they become jumbled up happenings that cannot be listed as sports.

Football, tennis, baseball, swimming, golf and all the popular sports have rules by which the contestants abide. There is usually an arbiter in the form of an umpire or referee to see that the rules are enforced. Dave Barry, in his refusal to count until Dempsey had moved from behind me and had gone to a neutral corner, was merely enforcing the rule insisted upon by Leo Flynn, Dempsey's manager, and agreed upon by the promoter, the commissioners and the boxers. Any other action of Barry's would have been in direct contradiction of the Illinois Boxing Commission rules, under which we boxed that night.

REASON FOR RULE

It will be argued "What right has the Illinois Boxing Commission or any other commission to change the established tradition with regard to knockdowns?" For the benefit of those individuals who live by tradition, I will say, "By the same right that Washington changed the form of government of the 13 colonies, or by the same prerogative that the Marquis of Queensberry exercised when he changed the London prize-ring rules to a new code named after himself."

In the Marquis of Queensberry rules it was compulsory for the man scoring a knockdown to step back 10 feet and not advance until the fallen foe gained his feet.

Each state makes its own rules, which become a part of the law legalizing boxing. There is very little of the original Queensberry code in the various states' rules governing boxing. But each state has as part of the law the clause regarding knockdown, so that it becomes not only an "unsporting" thing to stand behind a fallen opponent, but unlawful.

MAKES COMPARISONS

Had Dempsey and I been boxing under the old London prize-ring rules, the round would have ended at the knockdown and I would have had 38 seconds in which to come to scratch. The matches under the old London prize-ring rules were always to a finish with bare knuckles. The only virtue about this kind of fighting was that it put each man to the final test.

They were most boring spectacles, however, for after the hands got sore and disabled the contestants became wrestlers. These 10-round fights for the world heavyweight championship are entirely too short in which to establish the really better man. They are decidedly disadvantageous to the skillful man who goes on the principle of the constant drop of water wearing away the stone. It could only be by sheer accident that a man of my style could knock out a man of Dempsey's strength, resistance and courage inside 10 rounds. Fifteen rounds is the minimum number of rounds in which a man can establish his superiority as a champion fighter unless a knockout intervenes. However, I am in favor of 20-round matches for heavyweight championships.

BACK TO BOUT

"Your legs are fine," was the first thought I had after rising. Dempsey was darting toward me from the corner. He was crouching forward. His head was about four feet from the floor. A savage scowl covered his face as he looked up from below his heavy eyebrows. With his right hand up as a guard, the left hand dragged along the floor until he got within hitting distance. I said to myself:

I waited until it got three-quarters of the way on its course and then picked it off. In doing so, I started to circle to his right. This was to stay out of the way of his left hook.

Tunney next will describe how he polished off the badly battered, leaden-legged Dempsey, who kept charging in courageously to the end and congratulated Gene in sportsmanly fashion . . . What Al Capone had to say after "dropping 40 grand" on Jack.

BUTCH'S STYLE CHANGE LEADS TO DEFEAT

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The Noble Experiment failed.

As a result, Mose Butch, Oakland bantamweight, today is looking back upon a defeat in his record at the fists of Ross Fields, of Cleveland, in the 10-round main bout at the Arena, on the North Side, last night.

The Noble Experiment was Mose's idea of turning around and boxing in orthodox fashion because he found being a southpaw too unprofitable. He was in with another southpaw, the agile Ross Fields, of Cleveland, seconded by Jimmy Dunn, famous mentor of Johnny Kilbane when the latter was the featherweight champion of the world.

The experiment lasted just a little more than a round and a half, during which time Fields hit Mose with every number in the telephone book. Then Mose decided he had taken enough and switched back into the old reliable southpaw stance and southpawed it out with his opponent to the finish, winding up by making a rattling good fight out of it and just missing coming on to win or get an even break.

MOSE ALL MIXED UP

It was quite some time after he dropped his orthodox pose before Mose was able to get going even in his customary left-handed manner. He was all mixed up, the result of some six weeks of training in the gymnasium to perfect a right-hand position. There he was, betwixt and between, buffeted as a rightpaw and floundering as a southpaw. So it went on through the sixth round, with Fields winning all of these sessions to pile up a tremendous lead.

Then Mose began to click, and, in the seventh, he rallied to take the play completely away from his foe and punch him all over the ring at both long and short range in both this and the next frame. Fields pulled himself together to hold his own in the ninth, but, in the tenth, Mose again was all over him, and Ross was holding on in the closing seconds waiting for the final bell. The judges agreed on Fields as the winner, with Referee Al Grayber voting for a draw.

So ended the Noble Experiment. It was too bad for Butch that it had to be tried out against another natural southpaw. He'll probably continue to train at being an orthodox boxer, for he leaves within a few weeks for California, and whether or not he gets a lot of work out there depends upon whether or not he continues to be a wrongsider.

HOLT LACES LYLE

Billy Holt, local Negro welterweight, boxing more cautiously than in defeating Manuel Quintero recently at Motor Square Garden, outclassed Ray Lyle, of Akron, to win the 10-round semi-final. He cut Lyle's mouth badly in the third round and for a time it appeared as if the bout would have to be stopped. There were no knockdowns, but Lyle absorbed a thorough beating.

Billy Clair got the judges' decision over Walter Ketchel in a messy six-round light-heavyweight bout, and Joey Salino, a pocket edition of Paul Pirrone, the Cleveland middleweight, registered a hit in stopping Young Pace, another flyweight newcomer, in the opener, Pace being unable to leave his corner for the fourth round. It was a whirlwind fight and had the fans on edge throughout.

Mike Moran, former local bantamweight boxer, made his debut as a judge, and, working with L. K. Meininger, had an easy evening. Al Grayber and Jack Henderson alternated as referees.

RIVALS BATTLE IN HANDBALL, SQUASH PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Class B squads of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association Inter-Club League put formal conclusion to hostilities this afternoon, the lone day of the campaign whereon a complete card of squash and handball team contesting stands in prospect.

The loop-leading Keystone A. C. reserve racquet delegation, trailed closely by the champion P. A. A. quintet, can clinch winter honors by blanking the tail-end Pittsburgh Golf Club crew on the latter's courts, provided that the Winged Headers fail to better their 4-1 triumph of last week over Edgeworth, which last-named array the Schenley Farms troupe meets in the Sewickley bailiwick.

Should P. A. A. drop a match or more to Edgeworth and K. A. C. whitewash the Golfers, two unplayed tussles postponed from the Keystone-Sewickleyite fray of a fortnight ago would have no bearing on the destiny of the secondary title.

LEADERS FACE TEST

Meanwhile the Class A squashers resume action after lay-off of two successive Saturdays. McCook Reed and his Golf Club host encounters a severe test in invading the Keystone A. C. for battle with the only combine that clings to chance of heading them off for the circuit trophy. P. A. A., at home to Allegheny Country Club, reigns slight favorite.

A shake-up is not unlikely in the City Class A handball chase as Y. M. H. A. hazards its single-match lead in jaunting to the lair of its most threatening rival, Downtown Y. M. C. A., while out Fifth-and-Bigelow way, P. A. A. seeks advancement at expense of K. A. C. In the B division, Y. M. H. A. should enhance its already commanding margin in entertaining Downtown Y. M. C. A., and the Winged Head will aim at promotion to second position through triumph at Keystone A. C.

DAVIS AT CONFAB

J. Phillips Davis, president of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association, is in Philadelphia today in attendance at the annual meeting of the Middle States L. T. A., of which the local organization is a member. In special morning conclave with the sectional ranking committee, Davis sought added recognition for district players through arrangement for interchange of talent between Eastern and Western Pennsylvania tournaments.

Later in the day, at the general session, he presents a report upon the highly successful P. T. A. expansion program of 1932, and on Monday he will interview U. S. L. T. A. moguls in New York upon several highly important projects bearing upon future policy of the Steel City group.

Opposes Alma Mater

Howard Adams, member of the Pittsburgh Polo Club All-Stars, who meet the Yale varsity team in the Hunt Armory tonight. He is a former Yale ace, having been a teammate of Winston Guest, now an outstanding American internationalist. Adams will ride at No. 3 aganst his alma mater in tonight's contest, with Paul Mazuzan at No. 1 and Dave McCahill at No. 2.

DUKES DEFEAT W.-J. BOXERS IN INAUGURAL

Freddie Moore, Duquesne University's crack 145-pound boxer, Intercollegiate Conference champion in his class, exploded a ton or so of dynamite on the chin of Haler Osborn, clever Wash-Jeff ringman in the Dukes' gymnasium last night as the most startling inaugural gesture of the opening of the city's collegiate and Intercollegiate Conference boxing campaign.

Freddie Moore

The Dukes wound up defeating the Presidents, 4 to 3, in their seven-bout match, and thus are off to an early lead in the Conference race. Duquesne lost one bout by forfeit.

Moore, a hard hitter with both mitts and a clever boy on his pins, was ahead of Osborn and no more as the pair came out for the third round of their bout, the feature affair of the evening. Osborn was giving Freddie plenty of trouble and the champ's left hooks and right crosses were landing too high to be effective. Suddenly, after one minute and 20 seconds of action . . . wham—Moore dropped a short right to the point of Osborn's chin and down went the Prexie battler.

Referee Joe Orsini tolled the fatal 10 over him and could have counted for the rest of the night. Osborn had to be carried from the ring and to the Wash-Jeff dressing room. He revived and appeared to be ok, as the Presidents departed for home. The summary:

BADMINTON NEW SPORT HERE

Badminton, widely popular racquet game in Britain, may take definite place among court diversions in favor locally, if trend of sentiment at the Allegheny Country Club can be taken as indication of what may be expected elsewhere in the near future. The vigorous English indoor pastime, though a winter pastime of the Sewickley Heights clubhouse for some time, has taken extraordinary hold there the past few months, and, according to Julius Boise, able A. C. C. tennis professional, an intra-mural tournament now lies in prospect.

The sport, of course, is not entirely novel here; it has been tried out in half-hearted fashion by several district organizations, but has hitherto suffered from the circumstances that it is not well known in the United States and that few persons in this area have seen it played expertly enough to arouse keen interest.

The game is adaptable to both singles and doubles and is played by both men and women.

Among enthusiastic feminine badminton devotees at Allegheny are Mrs. F. G. Darlington, Jr., Mrs. J. Bernd Rose, Mrs. J. W. Arrott, Mrs. W. F. Clarkson, Mrs. Harry Darlington, Mrs. Stuart Brown, Jr., Mrs. C. L. Childs, Mrs. McClean Brown, Mrs. P. Donner, Mrs. R. T. Frick and Mrs. D. C. Bakewell. Perhaps, indeed, Pittsburgh's initial badminton tourney will be a women's event in singles and doubles.—P. G. SULLIVAN.

BIRKIE VICTOR IN POOR BOUT

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Hans Birkie, stolid German heavyweight, and Jimmy Braddock, once the clouting pride of the light-heavyweights, plodded through 10 weary rounds of a "feature" bout last night with scarcely half of the meagre crowd of 4,000 that saw the start, lasting through to hear the decision. It went to Birkie, apparently as a reward for being the less futile of the pair who substituted on short notice for Billy Petrolle and Bep Van Klaveren, after the Dutch Windmill cracked a hand in training.

Charley Massera, Pittsburgh heavyweight, scored an odd knockout over Arthur Huttick, promising New York youngster, in three rounds. A right floored Huttick for nine and he went down again to rest from a body barrage, apparently unhurt. But he stayed a second too long and was counted out. Massera weighed 180¼; Huttick, 183¼.

Pitt Frosh Tank Team Beats Schenley

The University of Pittsburgh's freshman swim team won its second dual meet of the week yesterday, downing the Schenley High splashers, 46 to 18, in the Schenley pool.

200-yard relay—Won by Pitt (Lindberg, Ruhe, Nadler and Chambers). Time—1:42.7.

50-yard free style—Won by Madden, Pitt; second, Chambers, Pitt; third, Price, Schenley. Time—:25.2.

100-yard back stroke—Won by Jones, Pitt; second, Wells, Pitt; third, Tortarelli, Schenley. Time—1:07.5.

220-yard free style—Won by Lebedda, Pitt; second, Sylvester, Schenley; third, Fountain, Schenley. Time—2:34.2.

100-yard breast stroke—Won by Landau, Pitt; second, Schrader, Schenley; third, Wahlberg, Pitt. Time—1:16.7.

100-yard free style—Won by Lindberg, Pitt; second, Madden, Pitt; third, Slevin, Schenley. Time—:57.

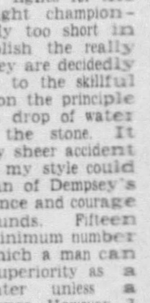
Washington Lad Wins Navy Letter

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 21.—One of three Pennsylvania students to receive their varsity "N. A." for football at the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, this year, is Eric Reed, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. McF. Reed.



Eric Reed

Reed went to the Naval Academy from Severn School, where he was a star. He is in his second year at the Academy, after having played on the Plebe team in 1931. He also is a member of the Academy lacrosse team.

GIZZY SUSPENDED

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The State Athletic Commission has announced the indefinite suspension of Battling Gizzy, of Donora; Lloyd Lebo, of Muir, Pa., and Rocco (Rex) Fallabel, of Hazleton, Pa., all boxers. They were suspended for failure to honor contracts.

Between Rounds

Ted Yarosz, undefeated Monaca welterweight, who meets Eddie (Kid) Wolfe a third time in the main bout at Motor Square Garden, Monday night, has been signed to oppose Andy Callahan in the Boston Arena the following Monday.

Jim McGirr, who stages his first show in the Moose Temple, downtown, next Wednesday night, announces his shows will start on the dot at 8:30 o'clock, and that there will be no silly intermission before the main bout, which, with the fair prices, ought to appeal immensely to the great majority of fans.

The Moose card is complete. Manuel Quintero and Billy Holt meet again in the main bout of 10 rounds; Matty Gorick and Marty McHale repeat in the eight-round semi-final; Johnny Durso and Jerry Clements box a six-rounder, and there will be three four-round preliminaries, with Shorty Washko meeting Johnny Woods, Georgie Schlee opposing Elmer Wilson and Joey Zelano taking on Jackie McCann.

Fight Results

At Arena, North Side—Ross Fields defeated Mose Butch, 10 rounds; Billy Holt defeated Ray Lyle, 10 rounds; Billy Clair defeated Walter Ketchel, 6 rounds; Joey Salino won by technical knockout over Young Pace, 4 rounds.

At New York—Hans Birkie defeated James J. Braddock, 10 rounds; Abe Feldman defeated Johnny Rousseau, 5 rounds; Johnny Bonito defeated Paris Apice, 5 rounds; Charley Massera knocked out Arthur Huttick, 3 rounds; Eddie Holmes defeated Charley Hudson, 5 rounds; Murray Brandt and Prince Saunders, drew, 5 rounds; Bob Olin defeated Paul Marque, 5 rounds.

At Philadelphia—Wally Sears won by a technical knockout over Billy Roederer, 10 rounds; Johnny Dixon defeated Jackie Shupack, 8 rounds; Spib Styer knocked out Farmer Joe Martin, 7 rounds.

BUCKEYES WIN

CINCINNATI, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Ohio State defeated Xavier University 31 to 19, in a basketball game here last night after the Musketeers had held a lead of 3 to 2 for the first nine minutes. A crowd estimated at 3,000 persons saw the contest.

Bill Wildey, linotype machinist with the Casper (Wyo.) Tribune-Herald, hooked a blackbird in a tree on a back east, other members of the party attest.

YALE POLOISTS FACE LOCALS

With league warfare set aside for the evening, an all-star team of riders, selected from the ranks of the Pittsburgh Polo League, will tackle Yale University's varsity poloists in the Hunt Armory tonight, with the game scheduled to get under way at 8:45 o'clock.

Yale's team is led by Capt. Chew Baldwin, of Hawaii, who will ride at the No. 2 position. The Hawaiian star has been a polo leader at Yale for the past four years, and completes his career with the Eli this season.

Paul Mazuzan leads the All-Star team at No. 1, with Dave McCahill at No. 2 and Howard Adams, a former Yale star, at No. 3. The probable lineup:

All-Stars		Yale
Mazuzan (C)	No. 1	Snow
McCahill	No. 2 (C)	Baldwin
Adams	No. 3	Secor

BLUE TRIO LOSES

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—A six-goal rally in the third chukker brought the first Cleveland Cavalry polo trio a 12½ to 8 victory over Yale last night.

Yale, given a two-goal courtesy handicap and another goal based on National ratings, led at the start of the chukker, 5 to 2½. Then Halter and Zink, of the Cavalry team started a long driving attack that put them in front. The lineup:

Cleveland—12½		Yale—8
Haller	No. 1	Tuttle
Kadow	No. 2	Baldwin
Zink	No. 3	Secor
	No. 1	Snow

Cleveland	2½	0	5	4—12½
Yale	4	1	1	2—8

Goals—Cleveland: Halter 5, Kadow 1, Zink 6. Yale: Tuttle 3, Baldwin 2.
Foul—Cleveland: Kadow.

Bad Spills Reduce Cleveland Bike Field

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Serious pileups marked the opening hours of the first six-day bicycle race ever held in Cleveland and reduced the starting list of 14 teams to 12 early today.

Anthony Beckman, English team member, was removed to a hospital with a severe cut in the back of the head and possible concussion of the brain when he piled over Frank Keating as the latter lost control of his mount and fell.

Juniata Five Wins Over W.-J., 38-31

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Jan. 21.—The Juniata College passers added further to the woes of Wash.-Jeff here last night, defeating the staggering Presidents, 38 to 31.

Matlack, Juniata guard, led in the scoring for the victors with 10 points. Zagray, of W. and J., scored 11. The lineup:

Juniata.	G.	F.	Pt.	W. & J.	G.	F.	Pt.

Middies Donate Army Fray Funds To Charity

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—Distribution of $100 to charity funds of the home city of each member of the varsity football team from receipts of the Army-Navy football game last December has been announced at the United States Naval Academy.

The announcement said between 35 and 40 cities will be affected by the donations and the remainder of the Navy's share of the service classic will be divided among several other cities including Philadelphia.

Navy officials said a formal announcement will be made Monday.

HERMAN SIGNS WITH CUBS

The former Cincinnati outfielder, by way of Brooklyn, went into a huddle with William Veeck, president of the Cubs, here yesterday afternoon and was induced to affix his name without hesitation. The salary was not announced.

Receivers Get Chicago Stadium

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The Chicago Stadium Corporation, owner of America's biggest indoor sports arena, surrendered its four-year fight to beat general economic conditions when Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson placed it in equity receivership.

The huge $5,000,000 building, scene of two great political conventions last summer, will continue to operate, however, with no radical change in policy and with hockey games, boxing and other sports going on as usual.

The corporation has general debts amounting to $128,000 and owes $180,000 in past due interest. Total current obligations, including bonds now due, was fixed at $525,000.

Santa Gets Technical Kayo Over Maloney

BOSTON, Jan. 21.—Jose Santa, ponderous Portuguese heavyweight, gained a five-round technical knockout over Jimmy Maloney, veteran Boston heavyweight, after they clashed heads in a clinch during their contest, scheduled for 10 rounds.

Santa's unintentional butt opened a wide cut over Maloney's eye, and Referee Johnny Martin refused to permit him to continue. Santa weighed 245, and Maloney 205.

MICHIGAN NOT TO MEET IRISH

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 21.—(AP.)—The University of Michigan football coaching staff has said "thumbs down" on the suggestion that Notre Dame be scheduled for a series of games.

Following agitation for a Michigan-Notre Dame football series, begun after the annual Rambler football banquet at South Bend that week, Athletic Director Fielding H. Yost called a meeting of the varsity coaches to learn their attitute toward such a game.

While what was said at the coaches' meeting, held Thursday afternoon, was kept secret, it has been learned on good authority that the football teachers did not favor scheduling Notre Dame. It was their concensus that only "continued hard times" and worse financial condition of the Michigan Athletic Association than at present should be allowed to alter Michigan's attitude.

For the present, it is believed, the coaches favor continuing the policy of scheduling six Western Conference elevens, Michigan State College and one team from the East.

Being Jealous Is Quick Way To Lose Happiness

If so, how?

Mary would like to know. There is a Certain Person who Simply Burns Her Up, as she puts it, and she simply can't be even polite if she so much as hears her name mentioned.

"I hate myself, too, for being that way," she confesses, "but I can't seem to help it!"

Can she?

Dear Elsie:

After reading the article you wrote about hate, I would like to ask, "How do you get over hate?" Do you go and apologize to the person you hate, or stay away? And must you speak to the person when you see her? Or just what do you think is the best way to refuse to hate?

I have been hating a girl for over a year now, and I know that I am the loser by it, for if I just hear her name, or anything about her, or come in contact with her, I become mean and spiteful, because I can't get her off my mind. I therefore spoil the time of the person I am with—and then I suppose people think I am a mean little devil.

I hate myself, too, for being that way. But what can I do? I am 20 years old, and I know that if I don't get over this soon there is no telling where I will land.

LIKES GIRL'S MOTHER

You see the one whom I hate is a girl my mother helped once, and who can't seem to forget it. She phones often and does things for my mother, and is always doing more than I can do for her. In fact, she has money, and what she does makes anything I can do look small. I just can't seem to get her out of my mind. My mother can't see anything wrong with all this. She likes the girl and is very friendly to her and thinks she is simply great.

The girl is just a little older than I am, and the way she acts, simply burns me up. I know I am going to simply go mad if things keep up the way they are.

What can I do? Maybe this letter sounds like a lot of bosh to you, but it is very important to me. I am desperate about it all and I know I can't go on this way. What is wrong with things? Why are they like this?

MARY.

What is wrong?

Just this, sissy. Your "nose is out of joint." You're jealous. You want to be the Whole Show with Mamma, and when this other youngster does something nice for her, instead of being glad that she appreciates what was done for her and is giving friendship and attentions in return for it, you're mad because its pushes you out of the spotlight.

And how'll you go about "refusing to hate" her

A DETRIMENT

Clear up the bad spots in yourself. Yes, I mean that, seriously. For jealousy is a mighty bad spot in any human, Mary. It can gyp you faster than anything else on earth. It can lose you the very things you're trying to use it to keep. It can destroy other people's love and respect for you. It can push you right out into the dark.

You may stir people up and create a lot of excitement by being mean and cranky, but you can't win out either with anyone or against anyone, by being that way.

How'll you refuse to hate? By seeing things clearly and sanely, and learning to be just and fair and generous. By learning to see the other fellow's side as well as your own, and realizing that you can be pesky and cussed, as well as the rest of the world, and that it is up to us all to look our own doings over, as well as the other fellow's.

So get busy on yourself, honey. Maybe this girl has overdone her gratitude. Maybe she can do more for Mama than you can. But, if you'll think a little bit about other folks, and not so much about yourself, you will keep your place in the sun just the same—and you'll be happy that Mama is being appreciated.

'CAUSE AND EFFECT'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

If you but knew, young man, all attendance, all ardour, all approval, your eyes shouting applause, your manner all golden opinion, if you but knew how busy the girl beaming across the table at you was for some hours before you met her! Girls are courageous members of the human tribe. As poor as the mouse that lived in the church one can be, and yet meet you for a party looking like the daughter of Midas. That peach-colored net blouse—her very best—as airy as a bit of spring cloudlet, was washed by the two pretty hands that crook a finger so daintily to lift her cup, and ironed on a tiny board, while she sang and hurried; that perfectly-placed amber lock that ripples under her hat edge now, hanging over a warm forehead. You would worship more devoutly still if you could guess at the things that were home-and-hand laundered—for you. And the sake of Love.

It would make an amusing movie, that frantic stretch of hours of preparation. But Gloriette hides this praiseworthy one of her perfections—the cleverness at sewing, mending, laundering, hat-trimming, glove-repairing. It's only the EFFECT she wants you to know about. And NOT the CAUSES for your bedazzlement! She would never have you know how many times she kicked off a pair of shoes to try again her other two pair. How many stockings came to light before those without one run appeared. That this amber hair was washed, and how she looked curling it in little sausages! How feverishly she held up dresses under her chin—with YOU in mind. And how she made the little cape that was decided upon at last—herself.

You see the finished Gloriette—tara-ra-a-a-ah! And your eyes applaud—and that's all that matters to her, and the little god! —NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Tired Body Cannot Fight Off Germs

It should be the aim of the wise to preserve strength and health. Some of the easy ways of doing this are neglected.

Dr. Copeland

We constantly read about new germs and new ways of combatting disease. They excite our interest, but why do we overlook the importance of so simple a thing as rest as a means of guarding against disease?

The medical profession has always recognized the importance of talking a sufficient number of hours of sleep and rest. The doctors know that a tired person is more susceptible to infectious diseases, such as the common cold, influenza and pneumonia.

It would seem that few individuals really appreciate that rest is essential to good health. Yet there is no question that fatigue affects health; it is the stepping stone to disease.

Many say they have "no time to rest." Others boast of their untiring ability to work in spite of lack of sleep and rest. They are fooling themselves and doing grave injustice to health and friends.

When I speak of "rest," I do not mean alone an adequate number of hours of sleep. Thorough relaxation, with freedom from worry; time to take nourishing food, fresh air and sunlight; and definite hours of play, must be included in the program.

Rest is beneficial in proportion to the completeness of relaxation and the absence of worry. Worry interferes with restful sleep and often disturbs appetite and digestion.

There are persons who just cannot rest though they try to do so. For years they have abused the health and strength of their bodies. I hope you will not permit yourself to reach this state of exhaustion.

Bear in mind that when you are tired, all of your internal organs are tired. The stomach of a tired person does not supply the normal amount of the digestive juices. Then there is gastric distress, such as heartburn, acidity, "billiousness," headache and lack of elimination. That is the reason why you should eat lightly when tired.

If you do mental work, you require just as much rest and relaxation as if you were doing hard muscular work. Mental fatigue is equivalent to physical fatigue. There have been a few famous men who managed to work on a limited number of hours of sleep. I beg of you not to be misled by these experiences. Such men are exceptional examples, with thousands of others among the famous who had to take a great deal of sleep and rest.

I am often asked whether exercise is beneficial for a tired and listless feeling. It is beneficial. But exercise without an abundance of rest is harmful. It is dangerous, too, when taken in excess. It should only be done in moderation and with definite periods of rest. Too often, impaired health can be traced to poorly supervised exercise.

Obtain at least seven or eight hours of restful sleep. Drink six to eight glasses of water daily. Avoid any tendency toward constipation. Daily baths should be taken before retiring. Bathing relieves fatigue, induces sleep, and aids the body in eliminating waste products.

Answers to Health Queries

V. H. Q.—What should a girl of 17, 5 feet 2 inches tall weigh, also a woman of 49, 5 feet 1 inch tall?

A.—They should weigh respectively about 115 pounds and 134 pounds. This is about the average weight for people of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Accurate End-Play

Mr. M. M. Phillips, of Victoria, Australia, appears to be a very keen student of the game of Bridge, judging from a number of hands he has submitted from actual play, illustrating the finer points of the game. The hand below is an interesting example of the method of executing an end-play to fulfill a doubled contract.

West—Dealer.

South	West	North	East
	Pass	Pass	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	3 ♣
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Double (1)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—West's Double was, to say the least, extremely optimistic, but his partner had made a bid, even though only an Overcall, and West had strong hopes that South could only obtain the lead in clubs by ruffing and thus probably reduce his trump holding to an equality with his own.

The Opening lead was the club Ten, which South won with the Ace, and then ruffed a club in Dummy. In making his plan of play, he decided that West must hold at least the Ace-Queen in diamonds, probably the heart Queen, and four or perhaps five trumps. East appeared to have not less than six clubs, headed by the King-Queen-Knave. To South the best plan of play seemed to be to develop an end-play through forcing West to lead up to the diamond King, unless the actual play showed a possibility of establishing hearts by ducking on the second round. South re-entered his own hand by leading a small heart, and led his last club, which was trumped in Dummy.

When West followed suit with the 9 of clubs, it seemed to definitely place East with six clubs. Four rounds of spades were now taken, and the distribution of the spade suit disclosed as originally 4-4-4-1. When East discarded two diamonds, South decided that he also held the heart Queen, and gave up his plan of possibly establishing hearts. Therefore, on the last round of trumps he discarded a heart from Dummy, leaving hearts King-8 and diamonds 10-9-5 in Dummy, while he held hearts 9-2 and Diamonds King-4-3. South led to the heart King. Both East and West followed suit, leaving the Queen alone outstanding.

As East was marked with the club King-Queen-Knave, he could have only one red card. So reasoning, and basing his conclusions also on West's Double, South now led the diamond Ten from Dummy, but did not play the King, so West, after cashing the diamond Knave, was compelled to give the Declarer a trick with the King and thus permit the fulfillment of the contract through a cleverly planned and carefully planned and carefully executed end-play.

Today's Question

North opens with a bid of one spade, to which South responds with a bid of three clubs. North now bids three diamonds. What should South bid, holding the following hand?

♠ J ♡ A K ◇ K J 5 4 ♣ K 10 8 7 5 3

Answer: Four diamonds. A higher bid should not be made, because of the minimum Forcing Takeout on the previous round and because of the danger of a misfit in spades and clubs.

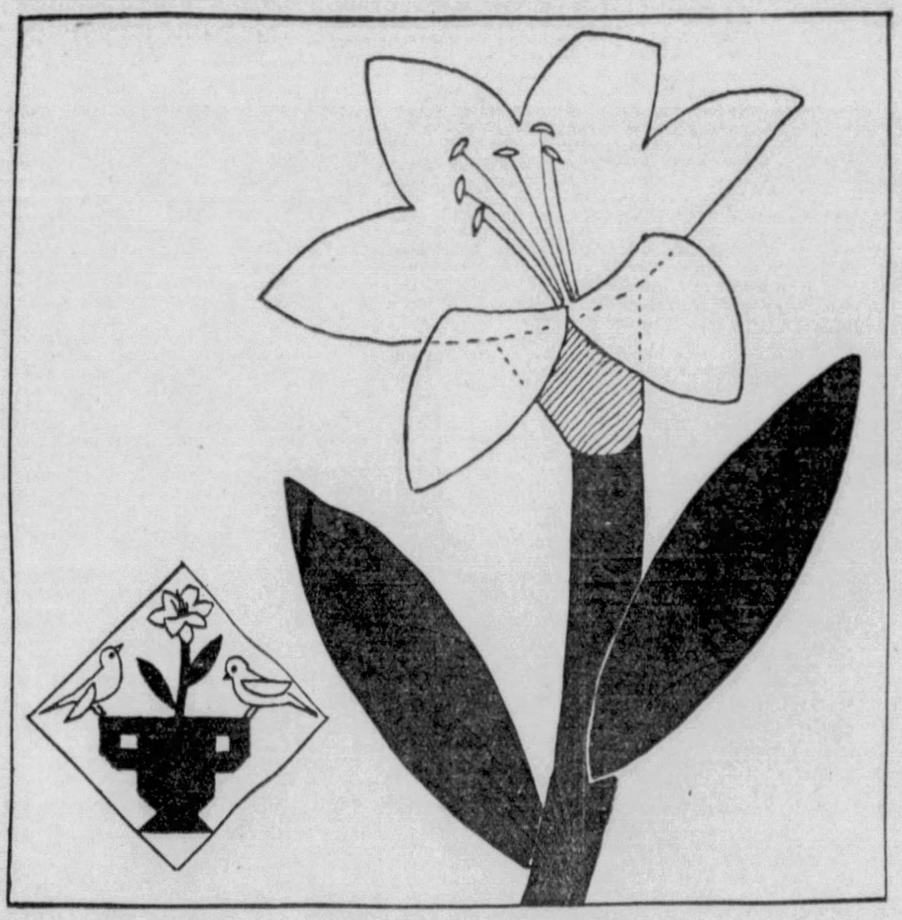
Nancy Page Quilt Club

By Florence La Ganke



Garden Bouquet Quilt -- Block 18 -- Lemon Lily

The tiger lily had proved such a favorite that Nancy decided she would design another lily for the flowers in the garden bouquet quilt. This time she chose the lemon lily, that pale yellow flower which is so fragrant and so enticing on a hot mid-summer's night. This time she has designed the lily with its petals open to the breezes.

There are three parts to the flower, two leaves and a stem. The stem is made preferably from bias tape in the same shade of green as is used for the leaves.

The bias tape is safe to use since it is made from fast-color material. It is easy to manipulate since it is cut on the bias. Then, too, since the edges are turned in ready for use it is more expeditiously put on.

The upper triangle of white which has been seamed onto the lower triangle of the pieced urn is ready for the lily and the two appliqued birds.

The patterns for urn and for birds were given early in the quilt series. If you do not have those or any of the back flower patterns send to your newspaper for them. A small notice is printed each week telling you how you may obtain the back copies.

Most quilt club members keep their patterns in the Nancy Page quilt scrapbook. This is made from a pattern designed by Nancy Page and may be procured from your paper also. The group held a discussion as to the advisability of using plain or figured material for the lily. Nancy voted in favor of plain. She wanted a pale yellow for the open part of the flower and a darker shade for the lower part.

By this time you are surely used to the best procedure for making the design. First, cut the picture along with its accompanying illustrations, from paper. Second, trace the flower, leaves and stem lightly on the white triangle. Third, trace the design onto lightweight cardboard. Cut out the various parts.

You will note the dotted lines going through some of the petals. These indicate the overlapping of material. It is best to allow as much as is shown, for if the pattern is cut too close to the finished shape it is apt to pull out of position.

In cutting the cloth be sure to allow one-quarter inch for turning under on all sides. The raw edges are turned under, basted and pressed in place.

Then the pieces are pinned on the white triangle as indicated by the faint tracery. By using a slanting, invisible hemming stitch the pieces are appliqued in place. The stamens are worked as in the tiger lily with fast-color embroidery cotton.

If, by any chance, you are using buttonhole stitch to applique the pieces, then you make no allowance for turning under the edges since the button holing covers the raw edges.

The two birds are appliqued as they stand pertly and meekly on the edge of the urn and then the eighteenth block is finished. This leaves two more flower blocks. The women wanted to know what flowers these would be. Nancy said one was the earliest flower to show its little head in the spring and the other was springy, too. This kept the members guessing until they met the following week.

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Trails Brixton Into Lonely Region

"Yes," I whispered.

"I don't know what this is all about," he said, "but Mr. Veritzen asked me to give you this bicycle, and to tell you he would be back for you as soon as he could manage it."

"I wish I could tell you what it all means tonight," I said earnestly, "but I can't. However, it's a sort of detective stunt, of which I'm sure you'll say nothing. And just as soon as it's over, I'll tell you all about it. Just now, I wonder if you'd help me a little bit. It's been some time since I rode a bicycle, but I'm sure I haven't forgotten how."

It was an old ruse, this, of appealing to competent young masculinity from the standpoint of feminine helplessness; but how well it worked!

"I'll do anything I can, Mrs. Graham," he said heartily, then added worriedly, "but this is a boy's bicycle. I couldn't find a girl's. Perhaps if—"

"A boy's wheel is perfectly all right," I said, "but I would like you to do two things for me. Find me a man's sweater I can borrow for an hour or two, and show me a place where I can practice riding this thing for a few minutes."

"Here's the sweater!" He pulled his own off over his head with the word, and I caught at the excuse to send him indoors.

CLERK HELPS MADGE

"Thank you so much," I said, "but I'll take it only on condition that you go right in and get your coat. I'll wait here for you. And bring me a piece of stout cord, please."

He was gone, lightly running, and I whisked off my motor coat and pulled on his sweater. Then, putting resolutely aside all thought of the incongruity of my costume, I bent to an examination of the bicycle. Yes, it was a type that I knew, and I trundled it to and fro along the path, getting the "feel of it."

When the young clerk came back, I had made my motor coat into a compact bundle, and spoke as casually as if riding a boy's bicycle from a hotel at one o'clock in the morning was a part of my ordinary routine.

"Will you help me tie this to the handle bars, so it won't slip and bother me? I never could tie a knot properly."

"Oh, sure thing!" He bent to his task enthusiastically, and spoke with pardonable triumph when he had finished.

"If that slips, I'll buy this bicycle for you. Now, what next?"

"Just hold this wheel steady while I mount it. There's room enough back here for me to practice on, if you'll guide it for me the first time or two."

JOINED BY NOEL

"Are you sure this is all right?" he asked anxiously, and at my assent he held the wheel as tensely as if a woman of 60 and weighing 200 pounds were mounting it. I was much more familiar with masculine bicycles than I had told him, for I have often amused myself by riding an old one of Dicky's around the farm; but I had not been on one for a year, and for the first few minutes I was glad indeed of the young man's careful guidance. Then, with returned confidence, I told him to let me go by myself, and rode up and down the path until I was certain that I had mastered the wheel.

"Gee!" the young man exclaimed when I dismounted in the shade of the lilac tree, "you sure can ride that thing. I wasted all my worry. But here comes one of the young men back again, and I must be going in, too. Somebody may be telephoning, or wanting something."

"Thank you so much for everything," I said fervently, and hoped that he understood I included his tact in effacing himself as Noel came hurrying up.

"Brixton's tramping up one of the roads leading to the mountains," Noel whispered. "Ronald's after him. Can you come with me now and see which one? But what are you going to do with that thing? It's a boy's wheel!"

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The woman who is tired of dyeing her hair will get rid of the coloring substance more quickly if she applies hot oil once or twice a week. If she wants a quick presto-change, a dye specialist will apply a remover.

When applying mascara to the eyelashes, let the little winkers rest upon the first finger of the left hand. Dip the brush in water, pass over the cake of mascara, apply lightly. Use dark brown mascara. Black is plainly artifice, gives the beauty game away.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A school friend of my husband (a lady) came to visit us for a few days about a month ago. I had met her and her husband once before and liked them very much. She sent me a very nice tablecloth for a Christmas gift. Would you advise me to send her a little gift now, or would it be all right to give her a gift when I meet her again, which will be around Easter, as I expect to visit her them? G.

I wouldn't advise you to send this kind friend a gift now, for that would seem, I think, a bit too obviously a "return" present. What I do think would be the perfect thing to do would be to wait until you visit her, and then, when you write your bread-and-butter letter in thanking for your visit, send with it a gift for her home. While you are visiting her, keep your eyes open to discover something that you think that she would enjoy having for her home.

Polite Suggestion

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been going out with a young man for two years. Recently he makes it a habit of calling at my home for me whenever he pleases. Is that proper? Shouldn't he telephone or make an appointment to see me? I'm not engaged to him. Do you think it ignorant on his part? How can I tell him about it? P.

If you find this as inconvenient as apparently you do . . . and I should think that you would . . . be quite direct with this young man, graciously direct. Explain to him that it would be more convenient for you if he would telephone to you before coming to your home, to find out if you have other plans, or if you are free. I am sure that you can say this so graciously and kindly that he will understand perfectly, and not be a bit disturbed by your polite suggestion.

STOP BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound; you will know them by their olive color. Take nightly for a week and note the difference. 15c, 30c, 60c.

LEO M. DUNN DIES IN EAST

The body of Leo M. Dunn, 59, vice president of the Graybar Electric Company, who died yesterday at his home in Garden City, L. I., will be brought to the home of a daughter, Mrs. Bernard J. Keenan, 257 Shadowlong avenue, Mt. Lebanon, tomorrow.

Mr. Dunn, for years active in the development of the electrical industry in the Pittsburgh district, was born in Michigan, October 13, 1873. He began his career here as an office boy with the Central District and Printing Telegraph Company, later associated with the Western Electric Company.

In 1918 he was transferred to a managership in Philadelphia. A year later he was made assistant eastern district manager. He went to New York in 1921 as manager of New York and Eastern district, manager, and two years later became general manager of the supply department, which position he held until the formation of the Graybar Electric Company in 1926, when he became vice president.

Besides Mrs. Keenan, he leaves another daughter, Miss Lorena M. Dunn, at home; a son, Paul P. Dunn, of Long Island; two brothers, R. T., of Long Island, and James R. Dunn, of Pittsburgh, and three sisters, Miss Lillian and Miss Anna Dunn, and Mrs. John Moore, of Pittsburgh.

VETS TO URGE EARLY BONUS

Resolutions demanding payment of the bonus at earliest possible date and indorsement of the "Buy American" movement were expected to be passed at the opening session today of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War state convention which continues through tomorrow at the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Greetings from military, governmental and civic organizations opened the morning session which included on the program the presentation of the Order of Purple Heart medal to approximately 50 disabled veterans by National Adjutant Vivian D. Corbly.

Nomination of state officers was scheduled for the afternoon. Two candidates for the state commander post now held by Samuel M. Lunine, Reading, are Joseph Mitchell, Scranton, and Attorney Robert J. Doran, Wilkes-Barre. The annual banquet will be held tonight.

TARIFF REMEDY GIVEN HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—(INS.)—A recommendation that the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to adjust import tariffs to the standing of the currency of the nation wherein the commodities are produced, was laid before President Hoover today by Representative Snell, of New York, House Republican leader.

Snell declared that American manufacturers were up against unbeatable competition in foreign countries with currencies so far below the American dollar in value. He has called a conference of House Republicans on Wednesday to take up the matter "of making the present tariff effective."

He indicated President Hoover approved his proposal in principle if not in form.

BENEFIT SHOW TOMORROW

Today is going to be an unusually big shopping day for canned goods and standard package groceries because donations of this class of foods are the only tickets required for the Sunday show at the Enright Theater tomorrow for the benefit of Father Cox' activities among the needy of Pittsburgh. Food only is wanted—no money will be accepted for admission.

"Blessed Event," one of the outstanding pictures of late 1932 with Lee Tracy and Dick Powell, will be the feature, and there will be newsreels, comedies and short subjects.

Harry Kalmine, regional director of the Warner Theaters, declares that it is the best program that has yet been offered for these Sunday benefits which have already provided approximately 50 tons of food for the poor.

Now about the donations. Those who attend are each expected to bring a package of wholesome food. Standard canned goods are wanted and also standard groceries such as you buy for your own homes. Don't figure "how little" you can give but try to give in food what you think the value of the entertainment would be at ticket office prices. Bring tea, coffee, sugar, canned milk, flour, cereals, preserves, potatoes, bacon, rice—in fact, something that will be welcome by a destitute family.

Father Cox is still confined to Mercy Hospital and needs the help of the public more than ever today. In the meantime, the Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph drive for subscriptions continues without interruption. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page brings a liberal cash commission to his unemployment relief fund.

FAMED RECIPES AT SCHOOL

The method of preparing eggplant au gratin by the notable recipe of the chef of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel will be told to Pittsburgh women who attend the Kroger Foundation Cooking School at Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall, beginning next Wednesday. Mrs. Helen Watts Schreiber, lecturer, will give the recipe during the three-day cooking school.

This is only one of the famous recipes to be discussed at the school. Women are urged to bring notebooks and pencils, as Mrs. Schreiber will describe in detail many new cooking ideas.

Besides the recipes, those attending the school will participate in a free gift list.

Benefit to Be Held For Parish Needy

Continuous performances from 1 p. m. will mark the benefit show to be held tomorrow under auspices of the St. Vincent de Paul Society conference of St. Mary's Catholic Church in the Arcadia Theater, 823 East Ohio street, North Side. The proceeds will be used to continue assistance to needy families of the parish.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Wilton street was dark and silent when Mary Faith left it that night, but the windows of the Maldons' apartment were brightly lighted and there was a long black glittering row of parked automobiles at the curb. The taxicab drew up beside them and Mary Faith felt three or four drops of icy rain on her face as she stepped out and paid the driver.

Inside, the tall building was like a modern Tower of Babel, filled with the murmur of many voices and of radio music that seeped into the halls from behind the closed doors of the two and three-room "housekeeping" suites. Mary Faith never had seen a child, or heard the voice of a child, in the building.

The colored woman who helped out whenever the Maldons had parties was just emerging from their suite when Mary Faith arrived. She held the door open and Mary Faith stepped inside. No one saw her for a moment as she stood in the tiny foyer, taking in the scene in the living room. Everything was just as she had known it would be. Four or five people were gathered around the tea-wagon at the far end of the room. Three or four others knelt on the rug beside a backgammon board. One couple danced slowly and dreamily in the middle of the floor. Kim and Claire.

A COOL GREETING

Claire's yellow head was tilted back in the crook of Kim's arm, and she was saying something to him that made him smile. There was something in his face—a look of tender absorption—that made Mary Faith feel as if someone had taken tight hold of her heart and was squeezing it. And then in an instant that look was gone. He said something to Claire, who turned and called out, "Hello, Mary Faith!" Then the two of them came forward.

"Hello, wife!" Kim said. "I had an idea you'd be along pretty soon, if I just waited for you."

"Yes, he's been fairly pacing the floor, waiting for you," Claire put in, and the group around the tea-wagon burst into a roar of laughter.

Jack Maldon had come up behind Mary Faith. "Let me take your coat," he said.

"Thanks, Jack." They confronted each other gravely in the midst of the confusion and the crazy din, exactly as two people who spoke the same language might have faced each other in a crowd of foreigners.

"Do you want to come out to the kitchen while I wash glasses?" he asked.

MARY FAITH TROUBLED

"That's a great idea," said Kim raucously. "You and Mary Faith go out and do your 'hewers of wood and carriers of water' act, and while you're doing that, I'll dance with your wife."

"Oh, come on and dance then and don't talk so much, Handsome!" Claire interrupted. With troubled eyes Mary Faith watched them dance across the room. She felt just then that she would cheerfully surrender a year of her life to be able to do what Claire was doing—to dance Kim away from everybody else, and make him like it.

For there was no doubt that Kim did like it. He followed Claire around the flat like her shadow all the rest of the night. Mary Faith watched them thoughtfully, jealously, and with a kind of sick despair, whenever she emerged from the hot kitchen where she and Jack were cooking the breakfast that everybody demanded along toward 4 o'clock.

"Gosh, I'm tired!" he said, opening a can of tomatoes for the omelette that Mary Faith was preparing. He sounded tired. Tired and discouraged. "I wish this crowd would clear out and let me get some sleep. Claire can do this sort of thing every night in the week. I don't know how she gets away with it."

"Sandy works all day," Jack said, "and he's as fresh as a daisy right now." He nodded his head in the direction of the living room. "Listen to him."

TREATED LIKE STRANGER

Mary Faith had been listening to Kim for the past five minutes. He had been singing "Frankie and Johnnie" for the crowd, and he was on the last verse now:

"This story has no morals—
This story only goes to show
That there ain't no good in men—"

"The whole place smells like a brewery, too," Jack went on, and then suddenly he laughed. "I'm not a very good host, am I, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith turned from the stove and faced him. "The trouble with you and me, Jack, is that we aren't 'good sports.' The only difference is that you try to be one, and I don't. I know there's a side of Kim that likes this sort of a good time, and I don't even pretend to understand that side of him."

It was a side of him that she had never known until long after she married him, she reflected a little later, watching him and Claire feed each other bits of toast and omelette. He was almost like a stranger to her, this loud-talking, laughing man, with his bloodshot eyes and rumpled blond hair.

He scowled when she begged him to start home as soon as breakfast had been eaten and the crowd was beginning to dance and drink again. And it came over her suddenly that he had always treated her with something between dislike and indifference when he was with Claire Maldon and her crowd.

"No, I'm not going home," he told her. "I'm having a good time. If you want to leave, it's more than okay with me . . . You sure do know how to put the graveyard touch to a party."

GOES HOME ALONE

Mary Faith wondered how he could find this one of Claire's so entertaining. It was so like all the other gatherings in the Maldon flat. The same drinks and games and dance-music. The same people—the red-haired woman who always wore pink, the one named Sally who always did a solo dance called "the mess-around" that she had learned, so she invariably explained, on a plantation in the South one year when she had wintered there, the little black-mustached man who could sit on a stone jug and light a match stuck in the toe of his shoes without falling off the jug. To Mary Faith it was all very dull and very silly.

Mary Faith finally telephoned for a cab and went home. It was broad daylight when she was awakened by the sound of coughing. She opened her eyes to find Kim standing beside the bed, trying to get out of his coat and vest. When she tried to help him, she found that his clothes were damp and that there were drops of moisture on his hair.

"What happened, Kim? You're wet."

He had to think for a minute before he answered her. "Raining outside," he said finally. Raining and snowing. My car stopped on the way home. Couldn't get it started again."

He refused to take the hot bath that she got ready for him, and by that time she had made him a cup of hot coffee he was sound asleep, breathing in an uneven, rapid way that made her remember the way he had breathed a few weeks before when he had bronchitis.

GETS PNEUMONIA

He slept all day. Even the cough that shook his body every few minutes did not rouse him. At ten that night Mary Faith sent for the doctor, who said that Kim was in for another siege of bronchitis.

The next morning he was worse, and on the third day his fever rose to a hundred and four degrees. Mary Faith called the doctor and by the time he arrived, Kim was delirious.

"Pneumonia," Dr. Thatcher said gravely. "I've been afraid of this. You see, he never properly recovered from the first attack of bronchitis."

Day after day Mary Faith nursed Kim, hovering over him with medicine or the little clinical thermometer that told the story of the fever that was torturing him. One night when his temperature ran very high, he began to call for her. She was sitting beside him and she laid her hand on his arm and asked him what he wanted.

"So, way down deep in his heart, I'm the person he thinks of and wants," she told herself as she sat there through the long hours of the night. He might flirt with a pretty girl, might go out to places like the Golden Pheasant Tavern for an evening's pleasure, or wander up to the Maldons' flat for a Dutch supper and a highball. But all those things were simply cheap excursions away from her, she mused. She and the baby and this little home of theirs were the important things in his life. She was tranquilly certain of it.

On the ninth day the fever broke and Kim was "out of the woods." A week later he was well enough to sit up, and Mary Faith hung over him, her face tender and radiant with the happiness of being near him and taking care of him.

"It's so wonderful—you're getting well and the three of us are here together, safe and happy," Mary Faith said one bright snowy morning as she put Kim's room in order. She leaned over him and laid her rosy cheek against his white one for a second. But in that second she felt him draw away from her.

"If you're through fussing around in here, I'd like to lie down and be quiet," he said levelly. "Take the baby with you when you go."

He could not have hurt her more—or surprised her more—if he had struck her. He had seemed so wholly hers during the last week or two. But she knew now that that was only because he had been weak and passive in his illness.

Mary Faith had been sleeping on the couch in the sitting room ever since New Years night, and when Kim was well enough to go back to work she made no change in that arrangement. February warmed into March, and at the end of March things were just as they had been in the autumn before Kim's illness. He stayed out late two or three times a week, making no excuse for his absences. In fact, he had very little to say to Mary Faith about anything. When he did talk to her, it was of ordinary things.

"Has my suit come back from the cleaner, Mary Faith?"

"It's in your closet, Kim."

"Thanks, Kim."

No kiss now when he left for the office. No more pleasant evenings before the sitting room fire. No gay little jaunts to the neighborhood moving picture theater.

Synopsis

Mary Faith, secretary to Mark Nesbit, wealthy businessman, gives up her position to marry Kimberley Farrell shiftless young lawyer. She realizes he has an eye for every girl, but hopes that married life will sober him and make him successful in his profession Instead, Kim is annoyed at Mary Faith's "Puritanism," and his friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, find her a dull companion. Learning that she is to become a mother, Mary Faith, for the first time, visits Kim's office. Kim is furious when Mary Faith finds him flirting with his blonde secretary. That night he informs his mother and Mary Faith that he is leaving. Heartbroken, Mary Faith decides not to tell him of her approaching motherhood. She gets a temporary job as a stenographer Kim returns after a son is born. Kim's attentions to other girls worry Mary Faith. Later he apologizes to her.

Now Go On

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Switching the meeting of the East Liberty section of the Sun-Telegraph - Warner Theaters-Junior Komic Club from the Sheridan Square Theater to the Enright today gave an opportunity for a real gala program and Manager Frank Roberts didn't let any grass grow under his feet in making preparations for it. It was a big affair, and although the youngsters left Manager Hooley, of the Sheridan Square, with some regret, they seemed glad to get back "home again."

Manager Roberts invited all of the members of this chapter to attend the showing of "Blessed Event" with Lee Tracy and Dick Powell, at tomorrow's Sunday benefit show for Father Cox. Children heretofore have not been urged to attend these benefit performances unless accompanied by parents.

The South Hills-Harris Chapter, Dormont, is swinging along in a merry way. Manager Harry Koch seems to have the knack of putting attractive shows together. Last week the members were entertained by Mary Armilla Klinesmith, who sang "Harlem Moon." Betty Rae Hiber sang "Please" and there was a duet "Fit as a Fiddle" by Ethel Smith and Shirley Binder.

CAMERAPHONE GAINS

The Cameraphone Chapter took in a lot of new members last week, including George Kastrantas, Billy Sinclair, Carl Garbe, Robert Garbe, Georgia Kastrantas, Eugene Jance, Helen Wright, Vivian Ruggiero, Elsie Wright, John Hasslinger, Betty Garbe, Myrtle Knipp, Phyllis Kirkpatrick, Peter Mariuzza, Frank De Marco, Henry Pauley and Venezia Franco. With the Sheridan Chapter moving over to the big Enright, Manager George Bronson is "up on his toes" in a membership drive and he's going to give Manager Roberts a lot of competition for supremacy in the East Liberty section.

The members of the Liberty Chapter at New Kensington are "steppers"—that is, they like their dancing. Preceding each meeting there is free instruction in this popular art and the kiddies seem to like it. These youngsters were scheduled for a good time with a movie star costume party today, with prizes for the best impersonations of screen favorites—both in costume and in action. The Liberty Chapter Komic Club Orchestra is swinging into popularity with the members, and Manager Floyd Morrow has to give it the greater part of the program on account of this popularity. The orchestra fits in admirably with the community singing.

Keep Those Neighbors' Children Out

He knocked us loose from two hundred and fifty million soda crackers.

Then we went for twice that on public utilities in the Middle West. We thought that was all right because a homer was getting it. We don't mind a local boy making good.

B has since turned out that the punk was an alien. He had l over here for years and had never been naturalized. When discovered that we were mad enough to sue him.

legal voting address. But we don't want immigrants trimming us on our own wharf.

The Swedish banker who pulled the match box trick didn't even wait until his baggage labels cooled off. He hustled right for Wall street and shoved the local talent all over the arena.

Then he took the next boat home. He didn't leave any forwarding address. We didn't even get a slow note on a bank in Egypt.

Come to think of it, the guy didn't even tell us what he thought of New York's skyline.

We should have new laws. Make 'em stricter.

After this, when anybody gives us the once-over-lightly, they have got to live here.

QUITE A COMMOTION

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

"There was quite a commotion for a short time among the girls of Miss Scott's class, who were giving the dance over at the Bijou Friday evening. While a number of them were out on the stage doing one of the numbers, the rest of them in the wings, a polecat ran along the rear of the stage and sent forth a mephitic blast. The rear doors of the building were open, evidently left so by the girls, who ran in and out a good deal, and the loud smelling cat evidently came up the alley and walked in."

French Crusade for French Industries Is a Warning to Buy American

"THE FRENCH are undoubtedly the greatest people on earth," said one of their satirists, the late Paul Blouet, better known to his readers as Max O'Rell. "This must be true," said he, "because even the French admit it themselves."

But consistency—no more than the payment of debts—is not among their virtues.

Only a few days ago Camille Aymard, the amusing person who writes for the Paris newspaper, "La Liberte," gave us Americans quite a solemn economic lecture on the folly of turning our buying power into the purchase of American goods.

We were told how essential it was to the preservation of our export trade that we should allow foreign-made goods to freely enter our home market. Any attempt to exclude, or even impede, products of alien manufacture, he declared, would be "murderous" to our interests.

Neither Aymard nor his paper, La Liberte, have a very good opinion of Americans. They are prone to refer to us as "American parvenus" and the "noveau riche of the war." Such remarks, perhaps, ease the repudiationist conscience.

BUT if they have any conception—not to say regard—for consistency, they should not be too outspoken in criticism of the "Buy American" movement, at the very time that the French are drawing on all their resources of propaganda, patriotic appeal and ingenuity, to inculcate the duty of all Frenchmen to "Buy French."

More than TWO YEARS before the United States awoke to the injury which the low wage scales and depreciated currencies of European countries were doing to our home market, the movement in France to confine purchases to French-made goods was in full cry.

With the fondness of the French for heroic postures and dramatic exaggeration, the appeal to "Buy French" is carried to the popular mind in phrases well calculated to stir both the fears and the passions of Frenchmen.

Reproduction of front cover of militant French publication, "Trumpeter of the New Times." Upper legend means, "To all who are French! Buy French!" Lower legend, "It is the duty of all."

OBSERVE the following extracts:

"Economic invasion in the past has been a PRELUDE to ARMED INVASION"—"We are INVADED by foreign products"—"THE WAR of 1914 was ONLY POSSIBLE because of THE BUSINESS which previously the Germans had been permitted TO PURSUE IN OUR COUNTRY"—"DANGER proceeds from the United States"—"Today AMERICAN PRODUCTS are INUNDATING the country" (Aujourd'hui les produits Americains inondent le pays)—THESE and SIMILAR LEGENDS GREET THE EYE AT EVERY TURN.

The printed page, the billboards, the street bus, the railway stations and carriages—wherever there is space for display—the duty to BUY FRENCH is drilled into the consciousness and habit of the people.

Now, no one can criticize the French for doing what they believe will protect France and French interests. They plume themselves upon being a very practical and realistic people.

They are doing precisely what the English are now doing in England and what we Americans AT LAST and far too TARDILY perceive we must also do in our country.

Judged from the standpoint of abstract or pure economics, or an ideal world, in which each nation would produce only what it could produce advantageously as to excellence and cheapness, compared with all other nations, these movements seem tending to restriction rather than the accepted commercial deal of expansion.

IT IS A CONDITION, however, and NOT A THEORY which confronts us.

THE FACT is indisputable that our tariff affords no protection against the free flow of goods into this country from the low wage-scale and cheap currency countries of Europe.

We can protect our home market in only two ways,—first, by the refusal of our citizens to buy foreign-made goods; second, by legislation that will exclude them.

If we fail in either respect it means the prolongation of the unemployment that now afflicts us upon a greater scale than in any country of the world.

It also means a continuance of the depression and the indefinite postponement of our economic recovery.

The relief of the unemployed and the protection of American workers is the primary duty of Americans.

And bound up with that is the duty to take all possible measures, and omit none, which will contribute to the revival of American industry.

It is the rapidly spreading realization that these great aims can be achieved only by the voluntary and patriotic action of Americans themselves that accounts for the strength and growth throughout the country of the movement to BUY AMERICAN.

Good Schools Essential

Public Education Is Not to Be Treated as a Luxury—Brief Comment on Local News.

During the next three months 104 boards of education in Allegheny County will prepare to levy the school tax for the year. Pressure will be brought to bear on them to reduce the tax. If it can be done without impairment of the educational program, fine! But expenses must not be cut by giving the children inferior schools. Good schools are indispensable.

No matter what tax rate is established, some of the school districts in the county will be unable to raise enough money for the maintenance of their schools. The state will have to come to the rescue with subsidies to help pay the teachers' salaries. It devolves upon the Legislature to see that the subsidies are sufficient to keep the schools open.

Reports from the school districts of Pennsylvania three months ago indicated that they would need state subsidies totaling $58,200,000 under the Edmunds act for teachers' salaries alone during the biennium 1933-1935. The budget submitted to the Legislature by Gov. Gifford Pinchot carries $53,000,000. The Legislature will be doing a questionable thing if it goes below the Governor's figure.

Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, says all schools can be kept open, despite the budget reduction, by providing for larger units of school administration and by distributing subsidies on the basis of the ability of the districts to pay taxes. What must be guarded against is the temptation to economize by deep cuts in teachers' salaries or by reducing the length of the school year.

Eight hundred and sixteen of the 2,516 teachers in the Allegheny County school system are college graduates. The year of the passage of the Edmunds act only 267 of the 1,992 teachers had college certificates. The increase in the ratio of college graduates from 13 to 32 per cent was effected by making the remuneration for teaching more attractive. But college graduates will no longer be attracted if the pay is reduced to the old level.

If teachers' salaries must be reduced, the reduction should be made with the distinct understanding that it is a temporary arrangement. The suggestion that the Edmunds act be amended to provide for a 10 per cent reduction for two years, with automatic restoration of the old salaries at the end of that period, is preferable to the cuts of 20 or 25 per cent proposed in bills now before the Legislature.

The value of motorized fire equipment was demon- strated in the fire which swept a business block in Smethport yesterday. Fire companies from nine towns in Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York reached the scene in time to save the village from destruction. They could not have come in time without motors.

Improvement of the Allegheny River at least to Oil City is a project that might well be started by the federal government at this time. Some work is being done at the lower end of the river, as a photograph in the Gravure Section of tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph bears witness. It shows the progress thus far made in the construction of the new million-dollar dam at Aspinwall.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I lay in the grass. So near, the green, sharp smell of grass filled my nose; the rough, salty taste of dirt was on my lips; the blades were bars across my eyes. Not very tall grass, but, lying so close, it seemed as high as the forest, and as filled with mystery and menace.

Before me stretched winding tunnels, secret dens, yawning pits. Monsters rambled along those tunnels, coiled in those dens. Monsters such as I had never seen in life. Great, hairy, spotted beasts; fanged serpents; creatures with malformed bodies and bulging eyes; eyeless horrors with gaping, bloody mouths. And danger oozed and clotted in those grass roots. Death lurked in those tangled shadows.

For long, sleepy moments I stared at those horrors, as another bug might have stared. I had forgotten my normal, man-sized world. I had forgotten the power and freedom of the life above the grass roots. I was drugged by the power of that tiny, terrible world of inch worms and ants—the grass-stem world, where life squirmed, trapped in darkness. For a space it was real to me—as real as it was to any bug. For a space its power over me was real. I believed in it so thoroughly that I did not question that power.

Later, toward evening, I climbed a mountain. Not an easy climb. Not nearly as easy as lying in the grass roots. A narrow, thorny trail through the chaparral. But presently I came out into the clearing. Far below me the land stretched—far and far—tumbled hills, deep ravines, small clearings set like golden tiles in the dark bronze of the forest. Over it all, twilight flowed in a quiet, green tide.

Many things lay beneath that tide. Farms lay beneath it, with the going and coming of men and their tools and herds—and their hopes and fears. The forest lay under it, quickening now with the stealthy night life of the beasts. And, somewhere, my little patch of grass lay under it, with its mimic dangers that had seemed so real and near from my bug's eye view.

ALL THIS LAY BELOW, BUT, FROM THE MOUNTAIN TOP, MY VIEW WAS SO WIDE THAT NONE OF IT CLUTCHED ME.

I knew it was all there. I knew there was ugliness there as well as beauty; pain as well as joy; danger as well as peace; but they no longer filled my senses with their terrible importance. Because I was separated from them by a healthy distance, they fell into their natural place in the scheme of things, and I resumed my natural relation to them.

Then, presently, the twilight deepened into amber, the deep ravines flowed with wine, until the land lay drenched in purple. And the sky, which had been a brittle, bright film, opened—and opened, veil upon veil, into the dark corridors of night. And all about me like lamps hung low along the endless miles of space, the great stars burned—sapphire, emerald, topaz, crystal white.

And my mind opened, as the sky had opened. While I lay in the grass, with my face pressed close to the earth and the darkness, I could see no farther than that earth. I was bound by its dumb and helpless terror. But now that I sat with the earth below me and my head in the stars, I felt that I, too, was an inhabitant of space, moving along a free and endless trail—and the little, slimy things that lay at the grass roots had no power over me.

And it came to me that life is like that. If one lay too close to the ground—too close to self and the little matters of self—any trifle was a tragedy. But if one chose to sit on a mountain, no matter how hard the climb, one rose above such confusion—and took one's place with the stars.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Unlocking Wedlock

Out of several hundred women college students, only 34 confessed that they were looking forward to marriage as a vocation. The rest no doubt are looking forward to it as a VACATION—which should inspire Reno speculators to go right ahead and build a lot of new hotels.

Marriage is the point at which a girl stops biting her lips, either to make them kissable or to keep from telling a man what she thinks about him.

* * *

Some men run away from temptation, some go looking for it—but, nowadays, most of them just stand still and wait for it to overtake them.

* * *

When a man has "wrecked her life," the screen heroine "emotes" all over the room and violently tears up a bunch of orchids. But the girl in real life bids him a smiling "Good Day!"—dabs a tear off her mascara and calls up the other man.

* * *

Perhaps that colored preacher, 'way down South, has the right idea. He always concludes the wedding service with "I pronounce you man and wife—and may God have mercy on your souls!"

* * *

A divorce lawyer is something like a dentist. Women are constantly rushing to him, just to find out what they are "suffering" from and to beg him to remove the "pain."

* * *

The Lord makes one kind of widow and the lawyer makes another kind; but Satan puts the finishing touches on both of them, and makes trouble for the next susceptible man.

Somehow, the more brilliant a woman's intellect, the more delighted she is to discover that a man has fallen in love with her for the way her hair waves over her forehead or the dimple at the corner of her mouth.

* * *

There is no infallible recipe for holding love; but the surest and simplest is "Never call a man up—and never call him down."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—They've finally coaxed me around for a little plain and fancy sitting at the photographer's. If he chucks me under the chin once more, his left shin will begin aching. Look, he seems to be going into a dance.

The last time I was in a photograph gallery they asked me to watch for the birdie. I suppose at my age they'll have an old owl hoot at me. Just a retired bird watcher. If I have to sit around watching birds, I'll choose a penguin. They kill me, walking like Chaplin.

He's slicking back my hair. He better let it alone and do something about these valises under my eyes. They'll photograph like a couple of Columbus Circles. A bag's-eye view! One thing, they don't hold up your head with iron braces any more. Just a minute—he's beginning to focus.

The old focus at home! My legs, limbs or whatever they are this season, don't please him. I'm not wild about them myself. But they are as good as Lisle Bell"s. He wants one crossed languidly over the other. I'm a newspaperman, not a tailor. You know, write pieces. The phone would ring.

His wife warns him to bring liver for the cat. He thinks that amusing. I sit here with legs pretzeled while he makes cat-and-liver jokes. I have a notion to tell him the one George Ade sent. Have to clean it up a little. But why waste a good gag on this mug. A mugger is what he really is.

* * *

He's sliding in plates. Sticks in one and takes out one. Stick, stack, stick, stack. I'll be all squeegeed again in a minute and catching at my thumbs. He's lost something. Likely the bulb they squeeze. Probably left it on the train to town this morning. As I began to waver, he yells, "Steady!" The way I'm weaving this will be a group picture. Whatever it is, it's a gift for posterity.

* * *

He says that was fine and I may relax a while. Isn't that ducky? About to go womp and Big Hearted Clarence permits you to rest. The next shot is to be standing. Will everybody please stand with heads bared? Have the orchestra play, "Save the King!" And you, little boy on the bicycle, ride on. This is no public photographing.

* * *

He is fixing the long focus lens. Wonder if Robert Sherwood was ever snapped standing? He wants me to look unconcerned. He'll ask me to lay an egg next. Now he's tip-toeing around me. I'm getting edgy. If he's going to wrestle, he's got to promise clean breaks. O, it's my necktie. He wants to flounce it into more of a loop. A bit of lady's maiding, I call it. And he'd better speed up, if he doesn't want me to let go a roller-coaster scream.

* * *

Something has gone wrong. He's scowling. I'll hang my head and look pensive. I don't want him to go sulking and leave me drooping here like a sick auk. What in the world did I come for anyway? I'd be better off trying to make a living than bouncing around trying to look pretty. The photographer smiles. The storm has cleared. Just the moody type.

* * *

The next shot will be with my chin cupped in hand. I hope it doesn't come out in lavender. He wants me to look soulful. That's a cinch. I come from sombre stock. Far back as I remember, we McIntyres were brooders. Wait until I unbutton my vest, ruffle my hair and sprawl in this arm chair. Make out I'm gazing into a roaring fire with my arm carelessly resting on a stag hound, dreaming of moonbeams on Point Neuf and my Peru bond. The ancient hearth tender.

* * *

All over now. I've been photographed standing, sitting and soul gazing. Hope I didn't move in that soul gazing. If that comes out right, it will give a few directors in Hollywood a twitch. I don't want George Fitzmaurice telegramming me. Why should I become a film star? I'm getting along. I'm fine.

* * *

But the best thing was not having to look for that birdie. Goofy things, anyway. Sleeping with their heads tucked under their arms. Imagine! And hopping about stiff legged and wiping their noses on wooden perches.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

By S. H. Connolly

1. When was "The Star Spangled Banner" written?
2. On what day of the week are elections held in the German Republic?
3. What ocean was once called the South Sea?
4. What great painting by Raphael is in Dresden, Germany?
5. From what is celluloid made?
6. Who was the favorite of Charles II, of England?
7. At what two places did Napoleon spend time in exile?
8. How many hours difference in time is there between New York and San Francisco?
9. What is supposed to be the origin of the three balls on a pawnbroker's sign?
10. What is a legation?

11. "The Decline of the West"	Johanna Spyri.
12. "Faust"	Ernest Hemingway.
13. "A Farewell to Arms"	Oswald Spangler.
14. "Heidi"	Francis Parkman.
15. "The Oregon Trail"	Johann Goethe.

1. 1814. 2. Sunday or national holidays. 3. Pacific. 4. Sistine Madonna. 5. Soluble guncotton and camphor. 6. Nell Gwynne. 7. Elba and St. Helena. 8. Three. 9. Coat of arms of the Medici Lombards, bankers. 10. Residence of a minister to a foreign country. 11. Oswald Spangler. 12. Johann Goethe. 13. Ernest Hemingway. 14. Johanna Spyri. 15. Francis Parkman.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Astronomer

He deals with whirling stars and suns
And endless realms of space,
With that unresting tide that runs
Its never-ending race.
The universe before him spins
In ordered, vast array
Until man's little strifes and sins
Unheeded, drop away.

He dwells afar, so rapt is he
In tracing that design
Which flows through all infinity,
Unhurried and benign.
And in his wisdom he can glean
God's purpose in the whole,
Which you and I have only seen
Within the human soul.

Isn't It So?
